Trial in the Submission of the Minnesota Constitution.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Jan. 14.

The Senate to-day confirmed BUCHANAN, of Pennsylvania, as Minister to China, by 38 to 17; JOHN ERGER, of California, as Minister to Chili; R. F. ARMS, of New-York, as Minister to Sweden; and RICHARD KEOWN MASON, of Virginia, as Minister to Brazil.

SIMON WEBSTER, of Georgetown—brother of Madame Bonjou—will be appointed Consul to Resel, Prussia.

The President says he will appoint the remaining Consuls on Saturday. BOYLAND, of Brooklyn, is strenuously urged for Consul to Hamburg.

The new regime to-morrow under which the President is authorized to restore to the active list the Navy officers retired by the late Naval Board. In order to prevent the nominations pending from falling by the expiration of this law, the Senate to-day took them all out of the hands of the Naval Committee and amended the whole, and then entered motions for reconsideration,—so that hereafter individual nominations, if deemed necessary, may be taken up and rejected. The general disposition of the Senate, as exhibited to-day, was clearly in favor of confirming the nominations.

WILLIAM WEBB, the United States Attorney for Kansas, arrived to-day. It is understood that he brought the Lecompton Constitution. He proceeded directly to the President's, who has been engaged all day, presumably on urgent business.

The Kansas bill, of which Senator HOUSTON gave notice to-day, proposes to submit both the Topeka and the Lecompton Constitutions to the popular vote, either for or against, and the admission of Kansas with either, if accepted. If neither is accepted, the bill authorizes a new Convention. The General says that his purpose is to secure the fullest exercise of popular sovereignty.

It is found that the Minnesota Constitution sent to Congress is not the one signed by the entire Convention and ratified by the people, but the one adopted in the minority Democratic segment of the Convention, while it was divided, and before the two segments united. It is signed by only the Democrats of the body, who numbered less than a majority of the delegates elected. There is little substantial difference in the two instruments.

This palpable and astounding fraud evidently has two objects—first, to ignore altogether the Republicans entirely in the Convention, and second, to involve the Minnesota case in irregularity, so as to furnish an excuse to hold it back until its admission can be made the price of the admission of Kansas.

The indications are that the Republicans will insist upon the production of the true document ere they will vote for the admission of Minnesota.

Although Col. PICKETT, our excellent Consul at New-Orleans, has not yet been removed, as was prematurely announced the other day, I learn that there is great danger that he will be "rotated" very soon.

Only one additional Consulate will be given to New-York. Who is to receive that is not yet determined.

I am informed that Senator BELLE is now carefully investigating the entire subject of ocean mail contracts by steamers, and is favorably disposed to the policy of extending Government aid to the establishment of steam lines where they are necessary for the development of American commerce.

Among the enterprises of this character which attract attention, and favorable consideration, is the long proposed establishment of a line of mail steamers between New-York and Para, in South America, and between Panama and Valparaiso on the Pacific. The latter scheme was seriously damaged before the last Congress, by the advocacy of a notorious New-York lobbyist, whose equivocal connection with the Press, and abuse of its power, led many, otherwise well disposed, to look suspiciously upon anything which he favored.

The Grand Jury have been for a week or more engaged in investigating charges against General CRITTENDEN, late Clerk of the House of Representatives, without obtaining any facts, as I am informed, tending to convict him of any impropriety.

Many ministers of Congress were subpoenaed for the purpose of examining them in regard to transactions between them and the Clerk. Many of them refused to give testimony, screening themselves behind their privilege. Among the number were Southern Democrats, some of whom were very bitter against your correspondent a year ago for having provoked the Corruption Investigation. I submit that their constituents are entitled to an explanation of their present refusal to testify. S.

XXXVth CONGRESS.....First Session.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Thursday, Jan. 14.

On motion of Mr. BELL, a resolution was adopted requesting the Secretary of the Interior to communicate an estimate of the quantity of land which will accrue, under the act of March, 1857, granting land to Minnesota for railroad purposes.

On motion of Mr. DAVIS, a resolution was adopted calling on the Secretary of War for the report of the Commission on War claims in Washington and Georgetown.

Mr. [illegible] gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill to provide for the admission of Kansas into the Union as a State.

The joint resolution directing the proposition of [illegible] relative to Commodore PAULDING, was made the special order for Wednesday next.

After the transaction of other business of no general importance, and an executive session, the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Jan. 14.

Mr. KELLY presented the petitions of BENJAMIN BERRY and five thousand other citizens of New-York, asking Congress to pass a law giving the public lands to actual settlers.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on on the state of the Union and considered the President's annual Message.

Mr. STEPHENS, of Georgia, explained and defended his views, as heretofore expressed. He affirmed and challenged a contradiction when he said that under the Neutrality laws as they now stand, owing to their imperfect phraseology, the President cannot at all use the Army or the Navy. All doubt should be removed by legislation respecting these laws. He argued that there was no power in the United States to prevent American citizens from quitting this country and joining an enemy, or to punish them. But for Commodore PAULDING's interposition, General WALKER would now be secure in the Presidency of Nicaragua, and he was the only legitimate chief magistrate of that country. He repeated that General WALKER and his men should be sent back, and full restitution made to them for their losses by the conduct of Commodore PAULDING, who kidnapped them.

Mr. BLAIR gave notice of his intention to offer a resolution for the appointment of a Committee with instructions to inquire into the expediency of acquiring territory by treaty, or otherwise, in Central or South America, for the purpose of colonizing there the free blacks from this country, and those who may hereafter obtain their freedom, to be protected as a dependency under the flag of the United States. He believed that extension of Slavery was at the bottom of the aggressive movements against Central America. He was opposed altogether to the schemes of rapacious propagandists, and thought that Government ought forthwith take steps with the view of such a colonization, which was recommended by JEFFERSON, and approved of by the Fathers of the Republic. In advocating his proposition he adverted to the commercial, civil and other blessings which would result from its consummation.

The resolution heretofore offered referring various parts of the President's Message to the appropriate committees was taken up for action, when

Mr. STANTON endeavored to engraft an amendment tendering thanks to PAULDING for his patriotic and spirited conduct. It was ruled out of order.

Mr. LEHMAN sent up an amendment, the reading of which occasioned much laughter, proposing that an inquiry be made to determine whether General WALKER was induced to enter upon a fillibuster expedition by the Ostend manifesto, and the letter of the Secretary of State, produced at fillibustering meetings held in New-York and elsewhere.

The resolutions to refer the subject of military expeditions to the Judiciary Committee was amended, with instructions to inquire into the expediency of amending the Neutrality laws.

The proposition by Mr. PHELPS, to refer the subject of the Pacific Railroad to the select Committee of Thirteen, was debated but not concluded.

The Committee then rose, and the House Adjourned.

The Position of Senator Hunter on the Kansas Question—Gov. Wise—Congressional Papers—Walker and Henningsen—Kansas, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Jan. 13, 1858.

I understand that the Administration does not rely implicitly upon the support of Senator HUNTER, of Virginia, for their project of forcing Kansas into the Union with a Constitution which the people have not ratified, but which they repudiate. He is said to be more than half inclined to take the same position as that occupied by Governor WISE,—and as he is not a man to be intimidated by threats or influenced by the seductions of patronage, it is natural to expect that the more he thinks of the Lecompton swindle, the less disposed will he be to give his vote for its consummation. I have again heard to-day that Senator HAMMOND, of South Carolina, is of the same way of thinking. The opposition of these two gentlemen to the Administration at this time will be fatal—unless they can succeed in wheedling some New-England man into voting for Lecompton, and manage to have another opponent absent at the critical juncture—contingencies not impossible in view of recent events.

Whatever may be the faults or foibles of Governor WISE, of Virginia, no one will accuse him of insincerity, or of looking two ways at once. Nor will he wink at these eccentricities of character even in a President. Hearing that Mr. BUCHANAN was accused of having been originally in favor of the submission of the whole Constitution of Kansas to the people, Mr. WISE addressed him a private friendly letter which he sent on here by his own son. The answer was so equivocal and unsatisfactory, that the Governor concluded at once that the charge was true, and I am told upon excellent authority, that he is now engaged in collecting evidences with a view of publicly convicting Mr. BUCHANAN of duplicity.

It is now pretty well understood that WALKER's last expedition was fitted out in the full conviction that it was approved and would not be interfered with by the Government. You will remember that months ago I informed your readers that the fillibusters had substantial reasons for believing that the Administration privately indorsed their enterprise; and if the Government will but bring General WALKER to a trial now, we shall probably have more definite information, under the solemnity of an oath, as to the foundation for those reasons.

A wag in Congress is a capital safety-valve. We have several of them, among whom Hon. HUMPHREY MARSHALL, perhaps, is chief—besides being one of the best constitutional lawyers in the country. "Laugh and grow fat," says the adage,—and the gentleman from Kentucky presents in his own person a weighty argument in support of its wisdom,—for I should think he would "kick the beam" at about two hundred and fifty. A day or two since he received a letter from one of WALKER's men, brought to Norfolk in the Savannah, stating that he was formerly one of his constituents; complaining that he had been brought from Nicaragua by force, an unwilling prisoner of war; was suffering for want of proper clothing and means of support, far away from home and friends, and desired that his case should be brought to the attention of the United States authorities, with a request for relief. Mr. MARSHALL at once addressed a letter to the President, stating the case, asking if Mr. So-and-so was a prisoner of war, and if so, in what war he was taken. The President has not yet answered the pertinent query.

Before quitting the fillibuster topic, let me say that in the course of a conversation with Gen. HENNINGSEN, last evening, he assured me that the supposition is entirely erroneous that there is, or has been, the slightest disagreement between him and Gen. WALKER in relation to the command in Nicaragua, or any other subject. In confirmation of this statement he refers to the well-known fact that when Gen. WALKER recently arrived at New-York on his parole, he proceeded at once to HENNINGSEN's house.

We had a pleasant little episode in the Senate to-day. Mr. FESS, of Indiana, failed completely in an effort to show that the Indiana resolutions which I telegraphed you on Sunday night did not, and were not intended to, sustain Senator DOUGLAS' position on the Kansas question. He referred to another resolution passed by the Indiana Convention in terms indorsing the Administration of Mr. BUCHANAN, and then tried to make it appear that as the resolutions first referred to (changed in a single word in telegraphing) declared that "hereafter" no State should be admitted into the Union except with a constitution ratified by her people, the Convention intended so far as Kansas is concerned, that she should come in upon the Lecompton "dodge." Mr. DOUGLAS pitched this battle most effectually by the simple story whether Kansas is now in the Union; and if not, whether, when she applies for admission "hereafter," the Indiana resolutions do not clearly apply to her case? It is most unfortunate for Mr. FESS's future, that he has committed himself so irretrievably against the sentiments of his constituency—for while its effect will be to destroy him with the people, the South, in the Senate, after he has mortified himself in their service, will unscrupulously vote him out of his seat and send him back to Indiana to try again whether he can secure a fair and constitutional election.

After Messrs. FESS and DOUGLAS had finished their passage-at-arms, Mr. HALE convulsed the Senate with a humorously-sarcastic "explanation" of the resolutions recently passed by the New-Hampshire Democratic State Convention. He protested that the Democracy of the North had been crowded dreadfully hard for the benefit of Slavery, of late years—so hard, indeed, that there was no place of refuge left for them in New-England, except in the Post-Offices and Custom-house. Under these circumstances all these resolutions ought to be very tenderly treated. But he didn't wish to interfere further, except to complain that the Indiana resolutions indorsing the Administration, but condemning the Lecompton scheme, were plagiarized, having originated with the New-Hampshire Convention aforesaid, whose members, after mature deliberation, had brought them forth as a platform for the Spring canvass. He thought the Indiana Convention would have been wise to hold on a little and see how this platform operated in New-Hampshire before they adopted it. They were an experiment at best, and, if they failed in one place, might be laid aside elsewhere for some other. As there seemed to be some little doubt as to the precise meaning of the resolutions taken as a whole, Mr. HALE explained in brief that they meant to indorse Mr. Buchanan, but to repudiate his acts—that's all! He thought the thing very simple and easy to be understood.

The delay by the Committee on Territories, in reporting the Minnesota Constitution, confirms my suggestion, made some weeks ago, to the effect that there was danger that the Kansas fight in Congress would be reduced to a fight against the admission of Minnesota. Let the public mark well the course of this Committee, and fix the responsibility of delay where it belongs. The pretext for the delay is some pretended irregularity, growing out of the fact that originally there were two Constitutional Conventions in Minnesota, the main body having split in the organization; but the real reason—one that is boldly avowed by some of the Committee—is the determination to use Minnesota as another lever by which to force Kansas into the Union with her repudiated Constitution. The Committee is composed of seven Senators, four of whom, DOUGLAS, JONES, (of Iowa,) COLLAMER, and WADE, are from the North. DOUGLAS, COLLAMER, and WADE, will unquestionably vote in Committee on Saturday next, in favor of reporting the Minnesota Constitution to the Senate, with a recommendation for her immediate admission. News from Kansas.

ST. LOUIS, Thursday, Jan. 14.

The reports of the Kansas returns arrive slowly, and the result of the election was still uncertain. Some disturbances had occurred at Kickapoo. A good deal of excitement prevailed in Western Missouri, where CALHOUN and others had gone for safety. At a meeting in the latter place resolutions were adopted expressing a determination to withhold all armed interference in Kansas affairs.

RETURNS OF THE ELECTION, ETC.

From the St. Louis Democrat, Jan. 12.

A number of gentlemen who arrived at the Planters' House, in this city, last night by the Pacific Railroad, having left Leavenworth City on the 7th inst., impart to us the following news respecting Kansas affairs, which, from the character of our informants, we are assured is entirely reliable.

The election had passed off with comparatively little disturbance. At Kickapoo Precinct the Pro-Slavery majority was 564.

Doniphan County gave about 800 majority for the Pro-Slavery ticket.

At Atchison the Free-State ticket was elected by about 30 majority, with the probable exception of Mr. HERRIFORD, a Senator, and one of the members of the Convention which framed the Lecompton Constitution, and who voted to have it submitted as a whole to the people. He was supported in part by the Free State men.

Johnson County gave 1,300 for the Pro-Slavery ticket, (McGee and Oxford frauds repeated.)

Bourbon County gave 430 Pro-Slavery majority.

Douglas County gave 500 majority for the Free-State ticket.

Other parts of the Territory had been but partially heard from.

Our informants state that at the time they left Leavenworth the impression was, after a careful counting up of the returns then received, that the Pro-Slavery men had elected their State officers, but that the Free-State Party had carried the Legislature.

The vote was small, more than half the voters of the Territory having declined voting for State officers, though a very decided expression was given against the Lecompton Constitution, the majority against it having been placed at ten thousand.

In many places in the Territory two distinct polls were kept open by the Calhoun Judges, and the Free State Judges.

A day or two after the election the Free-State men were busy issuing a great number of warrants and making arrests all over the Territory under the recent legislative act against fraudulent voting. Extensive frauds had been committed in many places. A Kickapoo Calhoun Judge named MILLER, or CALVERT, was arrested for stuffing the ballot-boxes. Another named REDMAN was arrested for receiving fraudulent ballots, but had been admitted to bail. The former was taken in charge by the Free-State citizens, and conducted into Leavenworth City on the 6th along with a cannon which had formerly been used by the Kickapoo Rangers, as was claimed, in battering down Eldridge's Hotel in Lawrence. Arriving at Leavenworth a large procession was formed, and the judge and the cannon were paraded in derision through the streets.

The people were much excited, and our informants state that a more serious mischief than ever is undoubtedly brewing in the Territory.

The United States troops are inactive.

The Democratic Party is all split to pieces, with a very large majority bitterly opposed to the Lecompton Constitution.

CALHOUN was out of the Territory, and supposed to be at Weston. He has been advised by his friends that it would not be prudent for him to be seen in Leavenworth City.

It is the impression of the gentlemen who have favored us with this detail, that all is not quiet in Kansas.

THE NASSAU-STREET HOMICIDE.

"Morgan L. Phillips, Physician," Arrested for Stabbing the Negro Roberts, and Discharged on Bail—He alleges that he did it in Self-Defence—Coroner's Inquest.

The colored man who was found, Wednesday evening, fatally stabbed in front of the Astor House, proves to have been JAMES ROBERTS, a sailor, who lived in Philadelphia, but was temporarily staying in this City, and boarding at No. 40 White-street. The Coroner's Jury seem to be satisfied that the mystery of his death is cleared up. Instead of being murdered, the testimony taken shows that he was stabbed by Dr. MORGAN L. PHILLIPS, of No. 25 Chambers-street, in self-defence. The doctor left his office about 9 o'clock in the evening, to get some refreshments, and in going through Nassau-street, when between Beekman and Ann, he was attacked by two white men and a negro. He took out his knife to defend himself, and, at the same time, retreated across the street towards a lamp, in order to see who his assailants were. ROBERTS, the negro, he says, followed over after him, and struck him in the face. PHILLIPS held up his knife, and told him he had better let him alone. The deceased made a spring at him to strike him a second time, when he received the stab, from the effect of which he subsequently died. After being stabbed, the deceased and his companions ran up Ann-street towards Broadway, and the Doctor after them, crying "Stop thief!" but, losing sight of him, he soon gave up the chase.

Subsequently he met Officer BELL, of the Sixth Ward, in City Hall, and related to him the circumstances of the assault. The officer went home with the Doctor and there left him, neither attaching much importance to the affair, or thinking anything serious would result from it. On seeing the account of ROBERTS' death in the morning papers, the officer at once went to the Doctor's office and arrested him. Dr. PHILLIPS positively identified the deceased as the one who assaulted him. He did not sufficiently see the white men to be able to identify them. This is the second time Dr. PHILLIPS has been assaulted, and the attack in each case is believed to have been instigated by a rival who runs a violent opposition to him in the same specialty, that of curing disreputable diseases by "Hunter's Red Drop." While Dr. PHILLIPS was under arrest in the Sixth Ward Station-house yesterday morning he gave to a reporter the following statement:

"I left my office, No. 25½ Chambers-street, to go and get some refreshments; I walked around the Park until I came to Beekman-street; about half way between Beekman and Ann, in Nassau-street, it was quite dark, no one in the street to be seen, and I was attacked by two or three men; one of them was a lad; he came up from behind me, and he said 'Phillips, what are you tearing down my bills for?' I replied, 'I am not tearing down your bills;' says he, 'You lie;' at the same time he struck me; I turned round and saw he had others with him; I took out a knife in order to defend myself, and at the same time I retreated across to the opposite side of the street, towards a light, in order to see my assailants; this colored man that came towards me, as I returned, said 'What is the matter, I have nothing to do with it; he then struck me in the face; to defend myself, I put out my knife towards him; I told him he had better leave me alone; after he struck me, I put my knife against him to defend myself, and he made a spring towards me, at the same time striking me in the face, and his body was brought in contact with my knife; they all threw then ran towards Ann-street; I followed them up Ann-street, towards Broadway, crying "Stop thief," when I lost sight of them; I gave up the chase, and went back to my office in Chambers-street, but did not go in; I went down Chatham-street, and then to Broadway, and then to Chatham-street, and from there to City Hall Place, where I met Officer Bell, and told him that I had had a difficulty with three men, and had used my dirk to defend myself. Officer Bell, knowing me, thought nothing of it, and let me go; I went home and slept in my own house last night, and was arrested this morning on my way to my office.

Coroner CONNERY commenced the inquest yesterday.

Officer Bell, of the Sixth Ward, testified that he saw Dr. Phillips about half past nine o'clock at the corner of Chambers-street and City Hall-place; there being blood on the Doctor's hands he asked him what the matter was; the Doctor told him that he had just met two white men and a negro in Nassau-street, and that they would have killed him if it had not been for his knife; witness replied, when he saw the knife, "Doctor, you must have used it, as there is blood upon it;" the Doctor replied, "But for the knife I would have been killed by them;" the Doctor requested him to walk up Chambers-street and keep an eye on his office, as he expected it would be attacked; witness went to the Doctor's office and walked in with him; on seeing the account of the murder of the negro in the morning papers, he concluded that Dr. Phillips had stabbed the deceased, and arrested him accordingly; the Doctor asked if the negro was dead, and on being answered in the affirmative said, "I did it in self-defence."

Sinclair Lithgow, a clerk of Doctor Phillips, testified that he went to the office about eleven o'clock Wednesday night; the Doctor was then in bed but got up and let him in; witness was told by the Doctor of his having been assaulted during the evening; the circumstances of the assault were the same as related by the previous witness.

Dr. Finnell testified that death was caused by hemorrhage from the axillary blood-vessels, the result of a stab under the arm pit.

There being no further witnesses, Dr. PHILLIPS was brought before the Jury, and it was found that he had been struck in the face as stated by himself. The case was then given to the Jury, who rendered the following VERDICT.

"That JAMES ROBERTS came to his death at the hands of MORGAN L. PHILLIPS; that it was done in self-defence, he previously having been attacked by a party of men, one of whom was the deceased, and that we, the Jury, think him justifiable in so doing."

Coroner CONNERY deemed it his duty to require Dr. PHILLIPS to give bail in the sum of $1,000, to insure his appearance in case he should be needed. Bail being procured, Dr. PHILLIPS was released from custody.

Ravages of the Yellow Fever at Port-au-Prince.

By the arrival of the brig Kalos, Capt. LONG, from Port-au-Prince, we learn that the yellow fever rages severely at that port. Scarcely a vessel visits the place without burying portions of her crew. Capt. LONG and five of his men out of a crew of eight were down with the fever. West India traders have christened the port "The Grave Yard," because of its sickly character.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

Saturday, the 26th of December, was observed as a holiday in monetary circles. The Bank of Ireland has followed the example of the Bank of England, and reduced its rates of discount to 8 ℘ cent.

On Monday, the 28th, the funds were very buoyant, prices advancing nearly one per cent. The best paper was readily negotiated in the Discount market at 7½ ℘ cent.

The demand for money at the Bank of England was moderately active. The bullion was rapidly augmented.

On the 29th money continued to grow easier, and there was every prospect of a further reduction in the Bank rates.

THE LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS.

LONDON, Wednesday, Dec. 30.

The Times City article says:

"The funds opened steadily and showed a tendency to increased firmness during the whole day, until after regular hours, when a sudden decline took place, which was attributed to operations in connection with the failure of the dealer announced yesterday. Money was in rather increased request, consequent upon the approaching termination of the year; but there was a full supply for loans on Government securities, at 4½ ℘ cent., and 7@7½ ℘ cent. in the discount market. About £40,000 in gold was sold to the Bank to-day, and there was an arrival of thirty thousand sovereigns from Scotland.

The Daily News City article says:

"The funds to-day were principally affected by considerations connected with the position of the account of the large operator whose failure was announced yesterday. The market is for the moment quite deranged by this event, owing to the belief that the defaulter has transactions open to the extent of considerably more than a million, chiefly in options.

At the Bank of England the demand for money to-day continued very moderate, owing to the fact that good bills are readily discounted in the open market from 7½ to 7 per cent. The amount of gold purchased by the Bank of England, to-day, was £40,000, inclusive of £9,000 or £10,000 in bar gold and United States coin, ex the steamer America, but exclusive of £30,000 in sovereigns received from Scotland. A large quantity of sovereigns ex the America are understood to have been sent to-day into the Branch of the Bank at Liverpool.

As money becomes easier in this market, and commercial affairs resume to some degree their nominal aspect, the exchanges between this country and the continent continue to droop. This afternoon the rates were quoted lower for bills on nearly all the leading continental markets."

COMMERCIAL FAILURES.

It is stated in the Times City article, that yesterday two suspensions were announced, the first being that of TUPTON, WOODS & Co., an old house of good repute in the Manchester trade, with liabilities for about £22,000, while the other is that of HIXSON BROTHERS & Co., of Old Broad-street. In neither case, however, are the prospects of liquidation unfavorable.

BURNING OF THE SARAH SANDS.

The steamer Sarah Sands, while conveying troops to India, took fire and burnt for fifteen hours. All the after part of the ship was destroyed, and she put into Mauritius for repairs. The troops showed perfect discipline, and the preservation of all on board was extraordinary.

A letter from Capt. CASTLE, Commander of the Sarah Sands, is published, describing the partial destruction of the ship, and the escape of the troops and crew. The fire was discovered at 3 45 P. M. The precautions adopted have already been given. The flames burnt through the upper deck, and at about 9 P. M. a fearful explosion took place in the Port Magazine.

By this time, says Capt. CASTLE, the ship was one body of flame from the stern to the main rigging, and thinking it scarcely possible to save her, I called Major BEAVE, in command of the troops, forward, and told him my opinion, requesting him to keep order among the troops until the last, but at the same time to use every exertion to check the fire. No person can describe the manner in which the men were to keep the fire back. The party were below, keeping the bulkhead cool from burning, several of whom were dragged up senseless, when fresh volunteers took their places, but who soon in turn again had to be dragged up in the same state. At 11 P. M. the maintopsail-yard took fire.

Mr. WELSH, Quarter-Master, and four or five soldiers, went off with wet blankets, and succeeded in extinguishing the flames there, but not until the yard and mast were nearly burnt through. About midnight we appeared to have made some impression on the fire, and after that drove it back, inch by inch, until daylight, when it had been completely got under. The ship now appeared in a fearful plight, merely the shell remaining. The port quarter was blown out by the explosion, fifteen feet of water was in the hold, and the ship was rolling heavily and taking in large quantities of water aft.

There is scarcely any news of general interest in this morning's journals.

It is announced that at the close of the year Mr. DAVID BARCLAY CHAPMAN will retire from the firm of Messrs. OTTERSON, GURNEY & Co.

The Relief of Lucknow—Preparations to Attack Canton.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Jan. 14.

The Senate to-day confirmed BUCHANAN, of Pennsylvania, as Minister to China, by 38 to 17; JOHN ERGER, of California, as Minister to Chili; R. F. ARMS, of New-York, as Minister to Sweden; and RICHARD KEOWN MASON, of Virginia, as Minister to Brazil.

SIMON WEBSTER, of Georgetown—brother of Madame Bonjou—will be appointed Consul to Resel, Prussia.

The President says he will appoint the remaining Consuls on Saturday. BOYLAND, of Brooklyn, is strenuously urged for Consul to Hamburg.

The new regime to-morrow under which the President is authorized to restore to the active list the Navy officers retired by the late Naval Board. In order to prevent the nominations pending from falling by the expiration of this law, the Senate to-day took them all out of the hands of the Naval Committee and amended the whole, and then entered motions for reconsideration,—so that hereafter individual nominations, if deemed necessary, may be taken up and rejected. The general disposition of the Senate, as exhibited to-day, was clearly in favor of confirming the nominations.

WILLIAM WEBB, the United States Attorney for Kansas, arrived to-day. It is understood that he brought the Lecompton Constitution. He proceeded directly to the President's, who has been engaged all day, presumably on urgent business.

The Kansas bill, of which Senator HOUSTON gave notice to-day, proposes to submit both the Topeka and the Lecompton Constitutions to the popular vote, either for or against, and the admission of Kansas with either, if accepted. If neither is accepted, the bill authorizes a new Convention. The General says that his purpose is to secure the fullest exercise of popular sovereignty.

It is found that the Minnesota Constitution sent to Congress is not the one signed by the entire Convention and ratified by the people, but the one adopted in the minority Democratic segment of the Convention, while it was divided, and before the two segments united. It is signed by only the Democrats of the body, who numbered less than a majority of the delegates elected. There is little substantial difference in the two instruments.

This palpable and astounding fraud evidently has two objects—first, to ignore altogether the Republicans entirely in the Convention, and second, to involve the Minnesota case in irregularity, so as to furnish an excuse to hold it back until its admission can be made the price of the admission of Kansas.

The indications are that the Republicans will insist upon the production of the true document ere they will vote for the admission of Minnesota.

Although Col. PICKETT, our excellent Consul at New-Orleans, has not yet been removed, as was prematurely announced the other day, I learn that there is great danger that he will be "rotated" very soon.

Only one additional Consulate will be given to New-York. Who is to receive that is not yet determined.

I am informed that Senator BELLE is now carefully investigating the entire subject of ocean mail contracts by steamers, and is favorably disposed to the policy of extending Government aid to the establishment of steam lines where they are necessary for the development of American commerce.

Among the enterprises of this character which attract attention, and favorable consideration, is the long proposed establishment of a line of mail steamers between New-York and Para, in South America, and between Panama and Valparaiso on the Pacific. The latter scheme was seriously damaged before the last Congress, by the advocacy of a notorious New-York lobbyist, whose equivocal connection with the Press, and abuse of its power, led many, otherwise well disposed, to look suspiciously upon anything which he favored.

The Grand Jury have been for a week or more engaged in investigating charges against General CRITTENDEN, late Clerk of the House of Representatives, without obtaining any facts, as I am informed, tending to convict him of any impropriety.

Many ministers of Congress were subpoenaed for the purpose of examining them in regard to transactions between them and the Clerk. Many of them refused to give testimony, screening themselves behind their privilege. Among the number were Southern Democrats, some of whom were very bitter against your correspondent a year ago for having provoked the Corruption Investigation. I submit that their constituents are entitled to an explanation of their present refusal to testify. S.

America Credit Abroad—The Herald in Europe.

From the Gazette de Lausanne, (Switzerland.)

We published lately a few fragments of an American newspaper, the New-York Herald, making with a rare cynicism the eulogy of bankruptcy. One of our most respectable citizens, who has long resided in New-York, informs us that the New-York Herald is a paper to which but little credit ought to be given, and that it would be unjust to consider it the organ of the American mercantile community. Here is the communication which we have received from our fellow-citizen:

MR. EDITOR: You have reproduced in your number of 14th December, some fragments of a detestable article of the New-York Herald upon the crisis, and also the inconsiderate and injurious, not to say insulting commentaries they have brought out from the French journals. As this occasion presents itself, and as the article in question seems to have obtained wider circulation than many former ones from the same origin, which are not much better, allow me to call your attention to the mode of proceeding, systematically adopted towards the United States, by a large portion of the French Press, which would betray either a great want of fairness and loyalty, or a great ignorance.

What! because it has pleased the New-York Herald, surnamed for the last twenty years the "Satanic Press," to print a satyric article, worthy of its career, past and present; because it has pleased its editor to proclaim "insolvency towards Europe as a lucky hit for America," and to declare "bankruptcy as systematized" a whole country, a whole class of its citizens would be responsible for these monstrous incubrations! Would not one suppose, indeed, that the merchants themselves have paid this journal, which since twenty years has shown itself their bitterest enemy, to proclaim far and wide principles which disgrace them?

Would you know more accurate what is the New-York Herald, one of the "best accredited" newspapers, [illegible] your authority? Read the edifying and truth[illegible] history given of it by the Presse of Paris in its number of 20th November last. The Herald was, in its earlier existence, a quasi-obscene publication, edited by a Scotchman as hideous in mind as ill-shaped in body, and who, ere long earned for himself the surname of "Mephistopheles of the press." Transforming his printing press into a real engine of torture, he used it to extort infamous black mail from the unfortunates about whom he had discovered some unfortunate secret. Forced by many judicial condemnations and repeated personal castigations, to become more decent in the form, he has not the less continued his diabolical depredations, with fiendish skillfulness—now upon a merchant in doubtful credit, then upon an embarrassed stage manager, and, again, upon an unfortunate artist in search of a public. Nothing escaped him; all was fish that came to his net. For the present the Herald has placed its columns more especially at the disposal of a coterie of stock jobbers. It is to serve their interests that it has steadily worked to help bring about the crisis, and that he has aggravated it by all the means within his reach.

And this is the paper which the European press hold in predilection!—the one from which they borrow almost exclusively articles to make them the basis of their attacks against the United States, its men and its institutions. Are only such publications worthy of circulation which are insulting and detrimental to the country? Why not reproduce, also, the paragraphs abusing France, her Sovereign and her institutions, which with but little research could be found in the columns of the Herald? Such, Mr. Editor, are the questions, and others of similar nature, to which I would fain receive a satisfactory answer.

I do not wish to make myself indiscriminately the eulogist of America; she has her share of errors, of faults and of wounds to heal; some are peculiarly American in their nature; let that country bear the responsibility; others, and they are perhaps not the least, are of European origin, and have been transmitted to her at a recent period;—let Europe and the European Press also assume honestly their responsibility. To every one his share. To whom the fault, for instance, if a few years ago the hanse-town of Hamburg found it convenient to transport, at its own expense, to New-York, a cargo of liberated convicts, which the latter city sent back with an energetic protest—if France, always so proud and so exacting, forgetful of all propriety, dared relieve its soil of a troublesome inglorious in casting him in the city of New-Orleans, and if a justly indignant population ejected him from their midst; if too often Switzerland has relieved herself by a similar process of pauper and heimathlose, (homeless,) become too burdensome? To whom the fault lastly, if from every portion of Europe is still poured out on the American Continent that torrent of immigration which carries in its flood, side by side, Utopist and Socialist Tentons, French Red Republicans, Chartists and Radical Britons, conspiring Jesuits, bigoted ultra-Montanists "et id genus omne?" Who is to blame if those many-colored cohorts soon form in file their ranks on American soil, and parade in menacing processions through the streets of her large cities, causing those to repent of too confiding and generous a hospitality, indiscriminately granted to all? Such are some of the fruits of Old Europe toward Young America. Let the press, then, be more impartial, moderate, and even indulgent when judgment will become it.

In giving room, Mr. Editor, to these hastily thrown together and rather incoherent reflections, you will oblige an AMERICAN BY ADOPTION.

No doubt, because the reproductions might be rather costly.—ED.

MR. SPURGEON'S IDEA OF HEAVEN.—Preaching at Shipley, near Leeds, Mr. SPURGEON alluded to Dr. Dick's wish, that he might spend an eternity in wandering from city to city. "For me," exclaims Mr. SPURGEON, "I do not see why it should be any job to pursue a more glorious study. My edition shall be this: I shall spend 5,000 years in looking into the wound in the left foot of Christ, and 5,000 years in looking into the wound in the right foot of Christ, and 10,000 years in looking into the wound in the right hand of Christ, and 10,000 years more in looking into the wound in the left hand of Christ, and 20,000 years in looking into the wound in his side. It is well asked—is this religion?

FRENCH REPRESENTATIONS OF SHAKESPEARE.—A representative of the British drama, anxious to make the French provincial public acquainted with SHAKESPEARE, is performing what the French call "[illegible]" at Strasburg, single-handed, i. e., he recites Hamlet in English, and all the other characters are spoken in French. He is said to be very successful.

THE KANSAS QUESTION.

[illegible] Wise's Letter and the Democracy [illegible]

From the Richmond Whig, Jan. 12.

The Democratic members of the General Assembly held a caucus in the hall of the House of Delegates evening before last, which was numerously attended. It was a funny affair—in many respects extremely mortifying. The caucus would not have been called so suddenly and precipitately but for the fact that Governor Wise's letter made its appearance in this city on Tuesday, and was a perfect bombshell in the camp. The caucus was called, therefore, with special reference to the Governor's letter. But there was not a single man in the body bold enough to say, in so many words, that he condemned and repudiated the sentiments of that letter—although the majority of them, as we are informed, make no bones of privately denouncing the Governor's doctrines in the most emphatic terms. Nearly every man who addressed the meeting seemed to keep one eye in the direction of the door, as if fearing the sudden advent of the Governor with a storm-cloud on his brow and a cow-hide in his hand. Not even the Governor's name was once mentioned, except by an ardent ex-friend of his in the person of Mr. KEMPER—and he mentioned it only to utter sentiments of condemnation against the doctrines of the Tammany letter. There were many no doubt who earnestly desired to defend the Governor, and the positions of his letter, and many more who secretly yearned to pitch into him with gloves off—but a nerveless timidity was the predominant feeling of those members of the caucus, and ruled all their proceedings. We have never before witnessed upon the once proud and independent soil of Virginia, so pitiable and humiliating a spectacle. Truly, the bold and independent spirit which animated the bosom of the fathers is extinct in the bosoms of the sons. If these politicians here at the Capital reflect the character of the people of Virginia, then we are a degenerate and degraded race, and are no more worthy to be called Virginians. In witnessing the timidity and the subserviency to power which was manifested in the caucus, we felt sad and sorrowful—sad and sorrowful in view of the fact that the light of pride, and courage, and manliness, which once irradiated the councils of the State, was dimmed and gone forever, and that in its place was the gloom of a moral cowardice which makes slaves and spaniels of us all. In a word, we felt ashamed of Virginia, and almost ashamed of our race.

We have no intention to pursue the sickening detail, and give a sketch of the remarks of the various speakers. Suffice it to say that Mr. BEALE, Mr. BARNOUR, and Mr. MASSIE were the only gentlemen who impressed us with the idea that we lived in a land of freedom. The others who spoke induced the temporary conclusion that we were the subjects of LOUIS NAPOLEON, or the dumb serfs of the Czar of Russia. Mr. CLAYBROOK uttered a sentiment—we hope, thoughtlessly and without deliberation, although in keeping with the general spirit of his speech—which astounded and shocked us beyond measure. He said, as nearly as we can recollect his language, and numbers of others, Whigs and Democrats, understood him as we did, that he "held his individual opinions always in entire submission to the will of his party!"

Without further remark at present we subjoin the several sets of resolutions which were offered in the caucus, all of which were set aside except those offered by Mr. Massie, which were adopted as expressive of the sense of the meeting. The first resolutions offered were those of Mr. COGHILL, and read thus:

Whereas, Positions have been taken both in the North and the South, calculated to divide and distract the Southern people, and to defeat the admission of Kansas into the Union upon an equal footing with other States;

Resolved, By the General Assembly of Virginia, that the people of Virginia, by an overwhelming majority, sustain President BUCHANAN in the position he occupies in relation to the admission of Kansas as a State under the Lecompton Constitution; and no man is authorized to speak in the name or by the authority of that people, who does not sustain the President in his position.

Resolved, In the opinion of this Legislature, Congress has no power to impose any condition upon a State admitted to the Union, other than those imposed by the Constitution of the United States; that any such attempt on the part of Congress was a violation of the rights of the States, is subversive of the most sacred principles of the Constitution, and calculated to destroy the boundary line between the rights of the States and the power of the Federal Government."

The next were those offered by Mr. FLOYD, which mean nothing, and, we presume, were designed to mean nothing, and which read thus:

Resolved, That the further harmony and peace of the Union demand, at the hands of the Congress of the United States, a speedy, satisfactory and final settlement of the affairs of Kansas.

Resolved, That we regard the conclusions of the President of the United States on that subject, in his late annual Message, as wise, moderate and sufficient, and, if carried out, will speedily effect that desirable object.

The next were those offered by Mr. BEALE, which have the merit of spirit and independence, and read thus:

Resolved, As the sense of the General Assembly of Virginia, that her Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States should use all proper exertions to secure the prompt and unconditional (other than under such conditions as are imposed by the Constitution of the United States) admission of Kansas as a State into the Union, under the Constitution framed by the Lecompton Convention.

Resolved, That any plan for the admission of Kansas into the Union which imposes conditions upon her people, after the acceptance by Congress of her Constitution, or which contemplates a resubmission of another Constitution in Congress for approval, is dangerous and alarming, in continuing the agitation of the Slavery question in the country, is utterly subversive of the principles of the Kansas-Nebraska act, and concedes to Congress the right to exercise powers not granted by the Constitution of the Union.

The next and last were those of Mr. MASSIE, and which were adopted by the caucus, and are in these words:

Resolved, That in the opinion of the Democratic members of the General Assembly of Virginia, the conclusion to which the President of the United States has arrived, as expressed in his recent message, in favor of the admission of Kansas as a State of this Union under the Lecompton Constitution, is just and right.

Resolved, That Congress has no right to look further into the Constitution submitted by the State of Kansas in its application to be admitted into this Union, than to see that the said Constitution is republican in its form.

Resolved, That it is due to the peace and harmony of this Union that Congress should speedily admit Kansas as a State under the Lecompton Constitution without further conditions.

It will be seen that the only point decided on in these resolutions is, that Kansas should be admitted into the Union under the Lecompton Constitution. There is not a word in disapprobation of the odorous Kansas policy of Walker and the President, as developed in WALKER'S message and speeches, and about which these very Virginian politicians made so much noise all last Summer and Fall. Is WALKER'S course in Kansas sustained by the President and Cabinet, indorsed by the Democracy of Virginia? Such is the conclusion we draw from the omission of the Democratic caucus on Monday night to express any opinion, pro or con on the subject. Verily, the Virginia Democracy is at a low ebb, when it has not the nerve to denounce formally what they affect to condemn in private with so much earnestness.

But we pause for the present, preferring to defer further criticism on the short-comings of this memorable Democratic caucus to a period of more leisure.

Comments of the Democratic Organs.

From the Richmond Enquirer, Jan. 12.

In to-day's issue of the Enquirer we publish a letter from Governor WISE to the Tammany Society of the City of New-York, in response to an invitation to him to attend their celebration of the anniversary of the victory of New-Orleans, on the Friday last. It is written with all the Governor's characteristic originality, nervousness and force. And in so far as it upholds the principle of popular sovereignty, as a matter of indisputable right and justice in Kansas and every where within the limits of the Republic, it commands our approbation. But considering all the circumstances of the case, we are constrained to regret its appearance at the present juncture. The Governor thinks that there has been unfairness on both sides—on the part of the Pro-Slavery man as well as the Anti-Slavery men in Kansas. And we are not prepared to differ from him. There has certainly been a breach of faith on the part of some of the members of the Lecompton Convention. But that is a thing with which, we think, Congress has nothing to do, unless it is evident that there has been such fraud as absolutely to trample on the popular will and misrepresent the sense of the people. He admits, of course, the regularity of the Convention, and, consequently, the legitimacy of the Constitution which it framed. He contends, however, that there was wrong in the refusal of the Convention to submit the whole Constitution for the adoption or rejection of the people; and we cordially concur with him. But we are obliged at this stage of [illegible] her legal consummation as a State which Congress [illegible] "enabling act," by prohibiting now to the class [illegible] of Kansas. In many respects she has as it has the discretionary power to do, she will not be a Territory any more. She will occupy the anomalous position of a sovereign and independent State within the limits of the confederacy, but not a member of it, and the authority of the Federal Government cannot be exerted one except by her forcible subjugation. Such would seem to be the logical view of this question, aside from other powerful reasons why Congress should not be influenced in its decision upon admitting Kansas by the result of this vote ordered by the Territorial Legislature. At best this vote can be regarded only as raising a presumption that the Lecompton Constitution is not an expression of the will of the majority of the people of Kansas, and that presumption will be but a very weak one when it is considered that the vote was irregular, at least if not illegal, and altogether partisan. But this presumption is rebutted by the superior evidence to the contrary furnished by the regular vote on the submission of the Constitution by the Convention, which should be conclusive with Congress as to the fact of the Constitution being the choice of the majority of the people of Kansas as their form of Government. If Congress shall not admit the Lecompton Constitution after it has become fully authenticated as the adopted government of the State of Kansas upon the feeble presumption raised by this irregular and partisan vote, such a decision will, we are assured, sound the knell of the Union. The people who will never submit that Kansas shall be denied admission into the Union, with her Constitution, as now, regularly, fairly and formally adopted, by reason of any such villainous manœuvre as this last move of Anti-Slavery.

The International Copyright Question—New Bill to be Introduced.

Correspondence of the Pennsylvania Inquirer.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Jan. 12, 1858.

Hon. E. JOY MORRIS, of Philadelphia, gave notice, early in the session of the House of Representatives, that he should introduce a bill providing for an international copyright. The bill which he has since perfected is as follows:

AN ACT TO PROVIDE FOR AN INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT.

Be it enacted, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

SECTION 1. That from and after the passage of this act, all the benefits of the first, second and third sections of the act entitled, "An act to amend the several acts respecting copyrights," passed Feb. 3, 1831, shall be extended to any person or persons not a citizen of the United States, and the widow, child or children of said person or persons, subject to the conditions and restrictions hereinafter mentioned.

SEC. 2. That no such person or persons shall be entitled to the benefit of this act, unless he or they shall, before publication, deposit a printed copy of the title of his or their book or books, map, chart, musical composition, cut or engraving, in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the District wherein the publication is made, and shall comply with all the provisions of sections fourth and fifth of the Act entitled "An Act to amend the several Acts respecting Copyrights," passed Feb. 3, 1831.

SEC. 3. That all the rights and immunities granted to citizens of the United States, in sections sixth and seventh of the Act entitled "An act to amend the several acts respecting copyrights," passed Feb. 3, 1831, shall be extended to any person or persons not citizens of the United States, subject to the conditions and restrictions hereinafter mentioned.

SEC. 4. That sections 10th, 11th, 12th and 13th of the act entitled, "An Act to amend the several acts respecting copyrights," passed Feb. 3, 1831, shall be incorporated with and constitute a part of this act.

SEC. 5. That no book or books, map, chart, musical composition, print, cut, or engraving, made or composed by any person or persons not a citizen or citizens of the United States, shall be entitled to the benefits and provisions of this act, unless the author or authors, proprietor or proprietors of the same, shall cause said book or books, map, chart, musical composition, print, cut, or engraving, to be printed and published in the United States by a citizen of the United States.

SEC. 6. That if said book or books, map, chart, musical composition, print, cut, or engraving, shall not be published and printed in the United States within six months after the publication in the country of which its author is a citizen, then the same may be imported or reprinted in this country free from the penalties of this act.

SEC. 7. That if in case the supply of said book or books, map, chart, musical composition, print, cut, or engraving shall be exhausted, and the publisher or author does not choose to print another edition of the same, then the work may be imported or reprinted in this country, free from the penalties of this act.

SEC. 8. That so soon as an author or publisher, not a citizen or citizens of the United States, shall, after securing a copyright in a book or books, map, chart, musical composition, print, cut, or engraving under this act, import copies of the foreign edition into this country for sale, then the importation or reprinting of the said works shall be free to any one.

SEC. 9. That the provisions and benefits of this act shall not apply to newspapers or periodical publications.

SEC. 10. That the benefits and provisions of this act shall be extended only to citizens or subjects of those foreign powers which shall have extended equal benefits and provisions to citizens of the United States.

It will be seen that the law proposed by Mr. MORRIS is on the principle of reciprocity. It will, of course be inoperative until similar laws or decrees are passed or established by foreign governments, one or all of which are at liberty to meet us on the fair and equal platform proposed. Once passed by us, we have done all that we can do, and it remains for them to accept the privileges conferred by allowing us the same. Any treaty on this subject, such as the one said to be suggested by Lord NAPIER, cannot effect the desired object, because its terms will be confined to the two parties uniting in it. The establishment of a general law, like that proposed by Mr. MORRIS, at once covers the whole ground, and, while reserving to us our rights, also protects us from the impositions of such countries as may not choose to accept our terms.

The subject is one of great and universal interest, and its management before Congress is in good hands. It is highly important that the bill should be made as nearly perfect as possible, and I am authorized by Mr. MORRIS to say that he will be very happy to receive any suggestions from any parties interested, particularly authors and publishers, in order that it may be relieved from all probable objections, and its passage by the present Congress rendered more certain.

Aaron Burr's Female Correspondence?

From the Albany Journal.

For the "vindication," not less of the "fame" of Col. BURR'S "Literary Executor," than of the truth of history, we feel it a duty to state facts, within our own knowledge, which, but for a provocation that will be deemed an "acquittance," we should never have publicly revealed.

Colonel BURR not only preserved, but with scrupulous care filed the letters he received. His correspondence, especially with the female sex, was extensive. Much of this was evidently with the educated and refined—much of it showing his association with the gifted and the pure of mind—much more with those whom his "wiles" had undermined and poisoned. These were, however, found in common with letters from an exceptionable class and of an offensive character. All were carefully indorsed, with the places, dates and names of the writers. Where letters were signed with initials, or were anonymous, the full name appeared in Colonel BURR'S hand-writing. With many of these letters were copies of Colonel B.'s replies. We remember a most interesting series between Colonel BURR and a West Indian lady of high culture, taste and purity, who for a long time combatted and resisted the false and fatal teachings of the tempter, only in the end to exemplify the experience of those who "first endure and then embrace" error.

The night before Col. BURR met Gen. HAMILTON he wrote a letter to his daughter THEODOSIA, (Mrs. ALSTON,) in which he bequeathed his Correspondence, contained, as he says, "in six blue boxes," to her, with the request that those which would "injure" the writers, should be burned. In his will, referring to these blue boxes again, as containing his "Confidential Female Correspondence," he says to his daughter: "You will find in them something to amuse, much to instruct, and much to forgive."

But, as Gen. HAMILTON instead of Col. BURR, fell, these "blue boxes" remained in the possession of Col. BURR, and came, after his death, into the hands of his "Literary Executor."

During our long and close intimacy with the late Mr. BURR, Mr. DAVIS and particularly when he was engaged in writing his Life of Burr, we conversed, confidentially, on the subject, at his house in Cherry-street, of perusing the materials out of which that History was woven. The "Confidential Female Correspondence" was before us, with all its strange and startling revelations. We [illegible] were written [illegible] Col. BURR, in this respect, Mr. DAVIS [illegible] BURR from deep, and general [illegible] THOMAS MOORE, who [illegible] Memoirs of Lord BYRON, Mr. DAVIS, [illegible] a kindred sense of what was due to society, [illegible] was the sacrifice an impressive one. Mr. DAVIS was tempted, by large pecuniary offers, to give this Correspondence to the Public. The late M. M. NOAH, we remember, is among those who offered Mr. DAVIS [illegible] for the letters. But he always, and with great emphasis, declared that they should never appear, either to blast Mr. BURR, or wound the feelings of persons whom they compromised.

Some of these Letters were returned by Mr. DAVIS, in carefully sealed packages, to persons remotely connected with the writers. A person in Virginia, after Old Dominion dames, wrote to the 'Literary Executor' asking that if letters, concerning his family, should be found among his papers, they might be delivered to a distinguished Virginian then in New-York, which was accordingly complied with. Mr. DAVIS likewise returned a package of letters to the lady by whom they were written; and he requested the writer of this article to make similar restitution of another package. But that too delicate communication was declined.

How Distinguished Foreigners Impose Upon Ladies—An Interesting Tale.

From the London Times.

Hon. Miss MARY JONES, a lady of 23 years of age, occupied apartments at No. 14, Bury-street, Pimlico. In the same house there resided a noble Pole, who styled himself the Count DE WARKOWSKI, and gave himself out as the son of Prince WITTGENSTEIN. He was 28 years old. This nobleman calls himself a Professor of science and languages, but in reality he lives by "taking up with ladies. When he is done with one lady he takes on with another." The Count is thus a terrible spoiler of the day. He was supposed to be married to the plaintiff in "SWINBURNE vs. SWINBURNE," that was broken off. Then he was engaged for four years to a Miss CHADWICK, but that engagement, also, was broken by mutual conclusion by the fathers, upon the ground of the Count's wishing to borrow £50. Then he proposed for Miss ROWSEY, then for her sister, and it would appear for many ladies besides. In this way he got his living by this sort of thing. The manner in which he opened the trenches upon Miss JONES was as follows: He attacked her maid with bouquets and letters, which were to be delivered to her mistress. Miss JONES resented, if possible, to put an end to the annoyance—so the story was astutely enough put by her counsel—by seeing the defendant, and remonstrating with him upon his conduct. This was just what WARKOWSKI wanted; once admitted, he was sure of victory; he had only to come on in the old style—to rave about his misfortunes—his exile—his noble father—his succession to £40,000 a year when that noble father was poisoned by his ancestors. Which of the points told most with Miss JONES it is impossible for us to say. £40,000 a year is a good round sum—the lady was 23 years of age, the noble Count has 28—a result follows. The lady who had sought the interview to console the exiled remained to console the defendant. WARKOWSKI, the exile, the noble heir to £40,000 per annum, was to find rest upon her bosom against the unkindly shafts of fate. As soon as the engagement was entered into, or shortly after—it was very strange,—the Count's remittances ceased to arrive with their fore-accustomed regularity. His watch and chain disappeared, and in point of fact he was under the necessity of borrowing £100 from Miss JONES. In return for this he gave her his note of hand; but, ignorant as he was of our laws and customs, he drew it upon a penny stamp. When the question of settlements came to be discussed the lady insisted that all her money should be settled upon herself, to which the defendant objected. His system was, that "Wealth, home and affection substantial, marriages were made and were not required." To this maxim in her turn the lady objected, and so the marriage was broken off. When the rupture was final and complete, the lady wished that the sum of money which she had lent to the plaintiff should be returned to her; but this he was unable or unwilling to do, and so the action arose. The defendant pleaded a set off, the particulars of which included some curious items.

In the first place, we find that the Count DE WARKOWSKI was not attired in such a manner as gave satisfaction to the lady. Above all things, on that day which was to be the happiest of their lives she wished him to look well. Accordingly, by her direction, and at her request, he proceeded to Messrs. NICOLL'S establishment and provided himself with a nuptial equipment at the cost of £18. Again, and before the transaction connected with the wedding suit, the Count had—equally at the plaintiff's request—provided himself with clothes from Messrs. DAVIES to the value of £27. Again, there was a charge of £15 15s. for a guitar bought by the Count for Miss JONES, at her request. This guitar, as he himself stated, he had bought in Clerkenwell. "I did away with the guitar," [illegible] fuse to say what I have done with it, and I don't mean to tell." This was not enough. A little lower down in the particulars of set-off there is a charge which is somewhat remarkable. To amount paid to pawnbroker by defendant at request of plaintiff to redeem a watch and chain, the property of the defendant, £21." The defendant, in fact, up to this point takes the charges for money disbursed upon himself and his pleasures or necessities, and coolly carries them to the plaintiff's account. Then an item of a diamond ring for himself, £15 15s., follows, and then items of another character. This noble Pole, the son of Prince WITTGENSTEIN, this heir to £40,000 a year, for example, coolly charges Miss JONES with the cost of a wedding-ring bought "at her request," 18s.; with a wedding cake at 21 2s., with a photograph of his own noble features at five shillings. Such were the particulars of the set-off pleaded by this dear creature in answer to Miss JONES' demand for a return of her £100. When he was put into the witness-box and examined, it appeared by his own confession that he made a trade of this kind of pursuit. His own statement was, that in the Swynfen matter he got £300 for the return of the lady's letters. "I have got money from many people; I have had money from a great many ladies," said WARKOWSKI to the Chief Justice on Monday last. "When I have done with one lady I take one with another." Will people ever take warning by exposures of this description? Is it possible that ladies of a certain position in the world, and who may therefore be supposed to have some knowledge of its ways, should suffer themselves to become the laughing-stocks and dupes of men who are probably cooks or couriers—if anything so low—in their own countries? It might have been hoped that the increasing habit of foreign travel would have done something in amendment of this form of folly. A very short run upon the Continent, or a mere smattering sort of acquaintance with Continental life, might teach our English ladies that foreign titles—even when genuine—are a very insufficient proof of respectability. The best advice we can give our fair country women for the future, when they come across one of these interesting refugees, is to keep him at arm's length until they have satisfied themselves of his own countrymen of acknowledged respectability the history of their new friend and his character.

ARISTOCRATIC HOMICIDE.—To the horror of the Allgemeine Zeitung and all the beaux esprits of broad Deutschland, a Prince BONCOMPAGNI, of Torre and TAXIS, having lately graduated with distinction as a law student, has sought and got a professor's chair at the University of Prague, and crowned this misdemeanor by marrying the daughter of his tutor, and, worse still, with the consent of the half sovereign head of that semi-royal house.

EXEMPTION FROM PANIC IN ITALY.—It is remarkable that during the crash of commercial houses throughout Austria, Stockholm, the Hanse Towns, Copenhagen, Great Britain and America, connected with American stocks is still an active one, not a single house at Turin or Genoa failed. A great national bank, in which the Government has a share of capital and the management of the kingdom, has its fair course of development.

TRANSLATIONS OF AMERICAN WORKS.—[illegible] STAN.—In the beginning of next year a [illegible] in the Russian [illegible] translations of American works, such as [illegible] Prescott's History of Mexico and Peru, [illegible] History of Greece, and [illegible] Norman Conquest, have been selected [illegible] his undertaking.

THE MORMONS.

Speeches of Brigham Young, John Taylor, Heber C. Kimball, &c. &c.

WE have received, per flag of the Deseret News, to Nov. 4, the papers containing inflammatory speeches from BRIGHAM YOUNG, JOHN TAYLOR, HEBER C. KIMBALL, and other prominent Mormons. We make extracts from some of the most fiery speeches of Mormon Abolitionists, to show the spirit that possesses the Saints:

[illegible] STATE'S COUNSEL TO THE WOMEN.

The saints in Jersey have had a great deal to overcome; they had not only the world against them, but they had their own feelings to contend with. We find they put in practice the counsel of the elders. They had many trials. They were glad in chastening and scourging. Brethren, do you believe that the cattle upon a thousand hills belong to the Lord? I do not know but that the very cattle may be dressed, and we may wear them instead of broadcloth. Well, now, those who are poorly dressed, as I have seen some specimens in the town, may be our clothing when we get through the mountains. Necessity, we say, is the mother of invention. The sisters may ask what they shall do for petticoats? I can tell you. [A Voice.—"Let the women wear pantaloons."] Necessity being the mother of invention, we will soon have something suitable; we have got common sense, and a good deal more to, if we will live our religion. Our ladies went to work and made coats of skins, and I suppose that mother Eve had a coat of skins on when she left Adam. But whether here was a petticoat, we are not told.

[illegible] WERE THE GREAT DEVIL'S HOOKER-GLASS.

I saw the devil's looking-glass once; in it the faults of others are written in capital letters, but our own are not kept in the dark. When the devil presents his looking-glass, do not allow him to overcome you. I have told you to shut your mouths, and now, when the devil's looking-glass is brought before you, I tell you to shut your eyes. You have no occasion to read, for you do, you will read the faults of every creature that your eyes, especially of those that you are most intimately associated with.

A CALL TO PEACE AND SIGN OF PEACE.

JOHN TAYLOR (brother to BRIGHAM) declares the freedom of Zion:

Let us be careful and do our duty, for we have not the game to play. Let us be faithful, honorable and keep the spirit of God. Let us so conduct ourselves and so order our lives before our heavenly Father that we will feel the approbation of Heaven, so that we shall have the testimony of Jesus, the Spirit of the Lord in us day after day.

When we have this Spirit in us we can say all is well. Then when I meet a man or woman and ask them how they are, I can feel well, for I can see the Spirit of truth in them. I have made a number of the same, and I required them to let it with you." "O, let it in light, the truth triumphs." There never was a time, when the Saints felt more well or more do now. It is so in every place; the saints feel the same spirit on the other side of the island and upon the remotest island of the sea; they feel better, and why? Because now is THEIR time. The Saints know this, for it and bear testimony to it.

[illegible] WOMEN.

I care not a snake of blood but I want to see the [illegible] of New-Jerusalem. I know the feelings of my brethren, who have been driven by the poor, miserable devils from Kirtland to Missouri and from Missouri to Illinois, and across the Mississippi and over the plains to the valleys of the mountains, and yet the poor curses cannot let us alone.

I can tell you the time is near when He will [illegible] whose right it is to reign, and when the Sons of Zion will dance with joy. Indeed, we shall have a [illegible] to say, "Lift your head and not be in a rage when he comes." We have to be very valiant, to do mighty things in the strength of Israel's God. Our enemies have got the arm of Jehovah to fight against, and He will work for the salvation of Zion. [illegible] the arm of the Lord hangs upon his arm, and inasmuch as we do right he will cause this [illegible] machine, and the hypocrites will be found out. Satan's kingdom will be overthrown, the the Saints of God [illegible] the land, and it will not be a great while before the Church will go back and take possession of their inheritances.

[illegible] SPEAKS FREE WILL.

Do I feel well? I never felt better in my life. I felt pretty well in Nauvoo, at the time Brother Smith was speaking of, though I did regret—perhaps I did wrong—but I felt regret that peace was procrastinated, for I said we had been about one or two years, if we I wanted to see order, the end, then I was willing to make peace—but I had to as it was.

We have made peace a great many times, and the [illegible] have been always ready to make us do as they wished us, but I can tell you that day is past and gone, and we will never promise the enemy they will have to take, and they will have to make peace with us, and we never shall make peace with them again. Brother BRIGHAM will designate the course they have got to take, and if they come here they have got to give up their arms; they cannot come in here with a gun or thirty-two-pounder or a pistol in their belts.

[illegible] will never cease [illegible] upon us, but we live the religion of Jesus Christ, we are as free as free to-day as we ever shall be, and when it comes to-morrow, we are free to-morrow, and we are free this year, and will be free next year, and will be free twenty years from now, or a thousand years, only a little more so; we increase and advance as we live.

Well, we shall prosper, and we shall not burn up our house, we shall not cut down our orchards, nor throw down our walls nor our farms, and I am not going to stop cultivating, because I just want to secure my land; I want to secure it and take good care of it.

[illegible] WOMEN ADVISED TO TAKE UP SALT.

JOHN YOUNG gives the following counsel:

I am not in the habit of saying much about the women; but they are said to be the weaker vessel, but I tell you some of them carry eighty heavy salt. I advise you, sisters, to take in your extra salt. Talk of being the weaker vessel, and carrying such a superabundance of salt! Sisters, live in peace with each other and do not allow yourselves to be faultfinding, but be peaceable and happy together.

BRIGHAM ADVISES THE FEMALES TO RAISE POTATOES.

Brother BRIGHAM said in a Sunday speech:

I wish the people to hasten and gather together and secure all that they have raised in the fields, and when this little difficulty is over I am going to instruct the people to begin to prepare for going into the mountains, also to raise less grain another year, and to secure that which we now have by putting it where our enemies cannot find it.

You can go to now where you can go. I know of places enough where I can hide this people and a thousand times more, and our enemies may hunt till doomsday and not be able to find us.

I do not know but we shall call upon the sisters to go into the fields and raise potatoes while their husbands go out to war, and if they can do that then perhaps we will see whether they can go into the fields and raise wheat while their husbands are defending Zion. In such an operation we shall call for volunteers, we shall have no compulsion about it. So soon as I learn that a woman would sooner go to the enemy's camp, just as soon I will send her and you may mark it. I shall not warrant such a one safe, only until she reaches the enemy's camp. I told a man yesterday, one that I understood wanted to go away, if that is your feeling and your faith I want you immediately conveyed to these troops. I want to forthwith send to our enemies every man and every woman that does not wish to do right, but wishes to join them in their crusade against this people. You may inquire why I take that course. I answer, so as to send them to hell as quick as possible.

EXPERIENCES OF A MORMON MISSIONARY IN ENGLAND.

Elder BENSON writes to his family in Utah:

It is not yet decided whether or not I shall go to Denmark this season. I soon expect to take a tour through Scotland with President PEARY. Brother TAMMY BUNKER is laboring here in this place with good success; he is well and feeling well. Brother JOHN SCOTT is over from Ireland on a visit, and is here with me; he feels well also; Brother JOHN KAY is doing an [illegible], and I believe all the missionaries, as far as I know, who have been sent from the Valley, are well in health and are doing the best they can.

In many places the persecution is so great, the people [illegible] being so intent against the truth and their [illegible] "with a hot iron" that the brethren have been compelled to leave off preaching in the open air. I have just received a letter from Brother R. F. RICHARDS, with an account of the work in Bristol; a mob attacked the Saints there last week with stones and sticks; several brethren were injured, one or two sisters had their eyes almost knocked out, and some were nearly strangled to death in the streets. The last news about the "Mormons" circumnavigated the whole world, and they feel to arise and slay every "Mormon" from the face of the earth.

The Elders are going forth "without purse and scrip," preaching the gospel to the Gentiles and doing much good; and all the faithful Saints are warning their neighbors by out-door preaching tract distributing, or their living testimony for the truth. The spirit of the world, is busy; opposition is rife; the fire of persecution begins to burn, and the spirit of animosity to inspire the wicked.

The [illegible] hearted priests, who live and fatten upon the heart's blood of the poor, are inciting the people to rob the servants of God and the editors are helping them by retailing the wholesale lies manufactured in the Bureau, and by the inventions of their own puzzled brains and evil, malignant hearts.

THE "NEWS" DEFIANT.

The Deseret News has an editorial article on the approach of the troops, in which the following passage occurs:

[illegible] to our readers faithfully inscribe that the Saints will deny their rights, forsake the rights guaranteed to our citizens by the Constitution and sacrificed to the tyrannic law, and tamely suffer themselves to be trampled upon forever? Our might easily [illegible] that we might receive and harbor our enemies [illegible] there are principles which we prize far higher than we do mere perishable things which they have set their hearts upon. If they can take a hint they may now be satisfied that we are not going to [illegible]

[illegible] President BUCHANAN was [illegible] Mormons have been in again but in subjection [illegible] the Mormons are continued, which a high [illegible] our Government [illegible] a distant spirit, and [illegible] to black-hearted corruption.

[illegible] BRIGHAM YOUNG MADE A FIVE-MINUTE SPEECH, reading thus:

The main object I had in coming to meeting this morning was to let you know that my health is better. This [illegible] I did not think it present to come out, but I [illegible] my post, and God is at the helm.

Brethren and sisters, you have all got to be tested, but I know I cannot [illegible] things fair your minds; I can only tell you things as I see them. There are a great many of this people who are exulting, and they feel as though they could whip a hundred men each, but you are not going to have very much trouble this Fall.

Those troops seem to feel determined to come here. There are about 1,400 of them, and with their officers and servants, altogether, there will be upwards of 2,000. Captain VAN VLIET advised them to turn in somewhere, and fix up and stay for the Winter, but he had no orders about the matter, therefore all he could do was to give them good counsel. But when he found they could not be prevailed upon to take his advice, he told them that if they attempted to come in here, we should slay them. When they heard this they shouted with anger, and the next day they travelled thirty miles toward this place; they made two days' march in one.

While Brother JONES was there, they exulted over us and sang all manner of songs, telling how they were going to kill Brother BRIGHAM and all those who would uphold Mormonism, and they seemed to be as crazy as fools. They swore that they would use every woman in this place at their own pleasure; that they would slay old BRIGHAM and old HEBER, and they actually think that there are many, especially women, that will feel glad should they enter this valley, that they may be ravished; indeed they carry on in a most disgraceful and disgusting manner.

How long is it since Br. BRIGHAM proffered to release all the women in the Territory who wished to be released? At the last October Conference that woman is to blame who wanted to be free, and did not take the liberty that was given; and I say to all mine that want to go, go, and I will give you all the writings you want, and besides that I will give you means to help you away.

These are my feelings in relation to those who want to go away. I say you shall have the privilege, for we will prepare the way so that you can go, if there are any who wish to go; and such men always been the case. But, as it happens, there are none who want to go, that we know of.

In relation to those soldiers coming here, they never can come, so long as the Lord God Almighty gives us strength to resist them, and that is not all; there is no man that can rule over this people but BRIGHAM YOUNG. [The congregation shouted "Amen."] And as long as we uphold him as the man holding the keys of this kingdom, he shall rule as Governor of this people. What a foolish thing it would be for us to drop Brother BRIGHAM, and say that a wicked man should have that position. To the hell and sorrow that this people would see. But we never will have any other man, as long as he liveth, and then it shall be his successor in office the man whom God Almighty appoints, and no other man.

[illegible] NOT TO BE ANNOYED.

President KIMBALL said in October:

Brethren and sisters, God bless you; may the Lord God Almighty bless you every one, and you may consider the blessing just the same as though I had my hands upon your heads, for every one of you shall be saved, who will do right and uphold his servants.

Now let Brother BRIGHAM alone, will you not? I do not suppose there are any who want to annoy him, but let the way to all of you, if you have difficulties that you cannot settle go to your Bishops, and then if the case is worthy of further notice, your Bishops can go to Brother BRIGHAM and get the proper information, and settle the difficulty accordingly. You have no idea how he is troubled, for of all the troublesome and perplexing things on the earth, the little complaints and murmurings of women are the most tedious.

MORMON WIVES.

Another Apostle has a word to the women:

The female portion of this community have to bear their share of this responsibility, and we know they are the best set of women that exist upon the earth, and that all the world will bear witness to when they talk about plurality.

Men of some discretion in the Gentile world ask questions about the operations of the plurality of wives among us. "How many wives live in each house? How do they get along in their associations? Are they all the time quarreling and fighting?" A man said to me once, "my wife would not stand it five minutes if I should bring a woman into my house to have a share of my company and my affections; I should have a hell upon earth, and no house that I could build would be big enough to hold my wife; it is marvelous to me how you can live and how it is you are not killed."

A MONROE POETS SONG.

A martial hymn to the Marseillaise, had been composed by a Saint. The opening verse and refrain are as follows:

The day of glory's on us beaming,
Arise! sons of our father land;
The hateful standard now is streaming,
Raised down by the tyrant's hand.
Hark! hark! within our country's border
The musket soldier's sound of cry,
Into your arms they almost fly
To fill to ruin and disorder.
Chorus—To arms! to citizens!
Your rallying array.
March on, march on, that Liberty
May crown our deeds to-day!

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Mr. Neilson Elected President, Thomas Boese Elected Clerk—Election of Executive Committees on Normal Schools, Free Academy and Evening Schools.

The Board of Education met on Wednesday evening, for the first time this year. The list of members we have lately published.

Mr. ROBERT A. ADAMS was elected temporary Chairman.

On calling the roll a quorum was found to be present.

A motion was then made to go into an election for President for the ensuing year.

Mr. GREEN offered an amendment to the effect that a recess for ten minutes be taken. The amendment prevailed, the original motion having been withdrawn.

A recess was then taken, the interval being devoted to energetic lobbying.

A large number of gentlemen not legitimately interested in the election were present, and labored with the most marked activity to affect the result. On the expiration of the recess the roll was again called, and the Board proceeded to ballot for a President. Each member, as his name was called, deposited his ballot.

The Chairman announced the vote to be as follows: Whole number of votes cast, 42; of which, Mr. Neilson got 24; Dr. Williams, 18; A. H. Green (not a candidate, but voted for by Dr. Williams,) 1.

Mr. NEILSON having a majority of the whole, was declared duly elected President.

On motion, the election was made unanimous, and a Committee was appointed to conduct the President elect to the chair.

Mr. NEILSON was appropriately welcomed by the acting Chairman, who resigned his seat to him. The President delivered an address on accepting the chair.

The Board then proceeded to ballot for Clerk.

The President announced the result to be as follows: Whole number of votes cast 43; Thomas Boese 28; William Gilbert 15; scattering 2.

Mr. BOESE (member of the late Board) was accordingly declared elected.

On motion the President's address was laid on the table, and ordered to be printed.

The Board then went into the election by ballot of Executive Committees.

It was moved, seconded, and carried, that the Board first elect a Committee on the Free Academy.

Mr. GREEN, on behalf of Dr. WILLIAMS, stated that, notwithstanding the urgent wishes of that gentleman's numerous friends, he begged to decline being voted for as a member of the Executive Committee on the Free Academy. Mr. GREEN, for himself, declined the same honor.

Before the result was announced, a motion was made and carried, that the Board go on to ballot for the other Executive Committees simultaneously.

There were three tickets in the field, neither of which obtained a majority on the first ballot.

Six members were elected on the Free Academy Committee, namely, Messrs. Kellows, Rabney, Tuthill, Crosier, Bloomfield and Adams.

In balloting for the Finance Committee five members were chosen, three of whom, Messrs Benedict, Coger and Haskell declined serving, and were excused.

Of the Executive Committee on Evening Schools, all the members were elected on the first ballot, their names being as follows: Messrs. White, Sinclair, Farley, Slote, Menteith, Byrne, and Gildersleeve.

A second effort to complete the Finance Committee was frustrated, owing to the withdrawal of Messrs. CURTIS and AULD, who had been elected on the first ballot.

On motion of Mr. DAVENPORT, the election was deferred till the next meeting.

The balloting for the Normal School Committee resulted in the election of the following gentlemen: Messrs. Bacon, Tweed, Lydecker, Davenport, Rollins, and Scofield.

The second ballot failed to elect the seventh member.

A third ballot was then entered upon, and no candidate having received a majority of the votes cast, no member was elected.

On the fourth ballot Mr. O'GRADY was elected, which completed the Committee.

[illegible] Sunday Kossuth made a five-minute speech, reading thus:

The main object I had in coming to meeting this morning was to let you know that my health is better. This [illegible] I did not think it present to come out, but I [illegible] my post, and God is at the helm.

Brethren and sisters, you have all got to be tested, but I know I cannot [illegible] things fair your minds; I can only tell you things as I see them. There are a great many of this people who are exulting, and they feel as though they could whip a hundred men each, but you are not going to have very much trouble this Fall.

Those troops seem to feel determined to come here. There are about 1,400 of them, and with their officers and servants, altogether, there will be upwards of 2,000. Captain VAN VLIET advised them to turn in somewhere, and fix up and stay for the Winter, but he had no orders about the matter, therefore all he could do was to give them good counsel. But when he found they could not be prevailed upon to take his advice, he told them that if they attempted to come in here, we should slay them. When they heard this they shouted with anger, and the next day they travelled thirty miles toward this place; they made two days' march in one.

While Brother JONES was there, they exulted over us and sang all manner of songs, telling how they were going to kill Brother BRIGHAM and all those who would uphold Mormonism, and they seemed to be as crazy as fools. They swore that they would use every woman in this place at their own pleasure; that they would slay old BRIGHAM and old HEBER, and they actually think that there are many, especially women, that will feel glad should they enter this valley, that they may be ravished; indeed they carry on in a most disgraceful and disgusting manner.

How long is it since Br. BRIGHAM proffered to release all the women in the Territory who wished to be released? At the last October Conference that woman is to blame who wanted to be free, and did not take the liberty that was given; and I say to all mine that want to go, go, and I will give you all the writings you want, and besides that I will give you means to help you away.

These are my feelings in relation to those who want to go away. I say you shall have the privilege, for we will prepare the way so that you can go, if there are any who wish to go; and such men always been the case. But, as it happens, there are none who want to go, that we know of.

In relation to those soldiers coming here, they never can come, so long as the Lord God Almighty gives us strength to resist them, and that is not all; there is no man that can rule over this people but BRIGHAM YOUNG. [The congregation shouted "Amen."] And as long as we uphold him as the man holding the keys of this kingdom, he shall rule as Governor of this people. NEWS OF THE DAY.

By the arrival at this port of the Canadian Company's screw-[illegible] steamer Arctic at Portland, we are [illegible] of four days' later advices from Great Britain and the Continent of Europe. The political news is of little importance, but financially the aspect of affairs is favorable. Only two failures of note are reported, and in both cases the prospect for liquidation was considered good. No advance is quoted in the Cotton market. The steamer Sarah Sands, while conveying troops to India, took fire and burned for several hours, but by the most extraordinary exertions the flames were subdued, without the loss of any lives. A letter from Capt. HAYLES, commander of the Sarah Sands, is published, giving the particulars of the fire and the escape of the troops and crew. The steamer reaches at too late an hour to admit of com-

By the arrival at this port from Port-au-Prince, we learn that the yellow fever is committing dreadful ravages at that port. Scarcely a vessel visits there without losing a portion of its crew, and the place in consequence has received from the traders the suggestive name of "The Graveyard."

Very little of general interest was done in Congress yesterday. In the Senate, Mr. HOUSTON gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill providing for the admission of Kansas into the Union. The joint resolution directing the presentation of a medal to Commodore PERRY was made the special order for Wednesday of next week. In [illegible], after the presentation of a petition from [illegible] and five thousand other citizens of New-York, for a law giving the public lands to actual settlers, the debate on the President's annual message was continued in Committee of the Whole, and took a somewhat wider range than [illegible]. Mr. BRODE, of Missouri, gave notice of his intention to introduce a resolution directing a Committee to inquire into the expediency of acquiring, by treaty or otherwise, in Central or South America, for the purpose of colonizing free negroes from this country, to be protected as a dependency under the flag of the United States.

In the State Senate yesterday notice was given of a resolution to introduce a bill repealing the act authorizing the building of a new City Hall in this City, and to protect the citizens of Brooklyn against imposition by gas companies. A preamble and resolution were offered, and laid over under the rule, relating to some legislation on the part of Congress to provide for the payment of the indebtedness of foreign Governments to American citizens. The Kansas resolutions, being the special order, were debated, and made the special order for to-day. The Assembly appears to be just as [illegible] as ever.

The Connecticut Union State Convention, which met at Hartford yesterday, nominated for Governor, WILLIAM A. BUCKINGHAM, of Norwich; for Lieutenant-Governor, JULIUS CATLIN, of Hartford; for Secretary of State, JOHN BOYD; for Comptroller, LORINE J. HENDEE, of Hebron, and for Treasurer, WILLIAM H. BURLL, of Clinton. [illegible] are all new men.

The Board of Aldermen added a Committee on [illegible] to the regular Committees of that Board, [illegible] meeting last evening, and referred to it a [illegible] from D. D. CONOVER, Esq., in which Mr. HENRY ERBEN is said to have received several thousand dollars in consequence of certain figures having been added to, instead of subtracted from, given sums. An ordinance was adopted to prevent unnecessary and injurious filling in of slips, &c., in the waters of the Battery Enlargement. Another, giving the Mayor and Aldermen power to appoint Dockmasters, was referred to the appropriate Committee.

The statistical section of the Geographical Society met last evening at the University, and gave promise that it is about to signalize itself by some active efforts in the promotion of statistical inquiry. The report of the section was read by JAMES ROBERTS, Esq., and some interesting information was elicited as to the extent of pauperism in this metropolis. Some discussion arose as to the comparative value of the private and public schools of the City.

The Hardware Dealers' Board of Trade celebrated their second annual festival last night by a banquet and entertainment at the St. Nicholas Hotel. Mr. ED. CORNING presided. Speeches were made by the President, by Rev. Dr. ADAMS, Mr. HENRY VAN BUREN, Mayor TIEMANN, PETER COOPER, Wm. H. FRY, Esq., and a number of others.

Very little business was transacted yesterday in the General Sessions. W. H. DAVIS, the confidence man, pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny, and received a sentence of three years and three months in the State Prison. DAVIS was the confederate of DEMPSEY, who was convicted on Wednesday. CHARLES APPEL, for burglary on the premises of SAMUEL SUYDAM, was sentenced to two years and three months. EDWARD JENNINGS and EDWARD COSTELLO pleaded guilty of an assault with intent to rob, and were sentenced each to the Penitentiary for two years. ABSALOM CRAWFORD was tried for passing counterfeit money. Owing to a very culpable neglect on the part of the Police Justice who examined the charge, the prosecution had to abandon the case. Mr. SPRINGER, the Assistant District-Attorney, took occasion to complain of the negligent manner in which criminal business at the Police Courts was often managed.

A motion was made, yesterday, before Justice ROSEKRANS, of the Supreme Court, to admit to bail the three policemen arrested on Wednesday, charged with unjustifiably shooting PATRICK LAWSON during a disturbance at the Eighth Poll District of the Eleventh Ward, on the night of the last December election. The motion being denied, the accused still remain in the custody of Inspector SMITHER, of the Eleventh Precinct, to await the result of the investigation pending before Justice DOWLEY.

The colored man ROBERTS, who was found lying on Broadway Wednesday evening, proves to have been a sailor from Philadelphia. Yesterday a "Hunter's Red Drop" man, one Dr. R. L. PHILLIPS, of Chambers-street, was arrested on suspicion of having murdered ROBERTS. He confessed that he did stab him, but said that he did so in self-defence, having been attacked when in his house, by ROBERTS and two white men. He did not [illegible] that he had inflicted a serious wound until [illegible] morning. The Coroner's jury [illegible] with the story and discharged him, but the Coroner held him to bail in $1,000. The doctor says that the negro occasionally posted bills for a rival "No cure, no pay" establishment, and that the collision grew out of this.

A collision took place between two colored boys, named Wm. ALLEN and HENRY HAYNES, at the corner of Navy and Johnson streets, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon, at the close of which HAYNES, the younger and smaller, threw a piece of brick at ALLEN, fracturing his skull, and causing death a few hours afterwards. HAYNES made his escape and had not been captured up to a late hour last night.

The central frame of the new United States steamer Seminole, building under contract with Mr. WEBSTER, at the ship-yard foot of Houston-street, was raised yesterday afternoon; a band of music playing lively national airs during the ceremony, and a large number of prominent citizens from Brooklyn, Hon. JOHN MCKEON, the Recorder, Mayor Tiemann, and many other distinguished gentlemen being present. A collation was served, with toasts and speeches.

The Flour market, yesterday, was [illegible] The receipts of Produce were [illegible], including a small amount of Flour, but no [illegible]

Wheat was in better request at [illegible] figures. Corn was more freely offered and purchased, but at lower quotations. Cotton was less active, yet we still hold. Provisions were irregular during the day, closing, however, with a moderate inquiry at about former rates. Groceries were less sought after, and were heavy. Freights were depressed and rates favored shippers.

The Last News from Salt Lake—Intentions of the Mormons.

The intelligence from Salt Lake City, brought by the Star of the West, on Wednesday, though it contains no particulars of recent events among the Saints of great importance, is exceedingly interesting, nevertheless, inasmuch as it furnishes us evidence of the intentions of BRIGHAM YOUNG, with regard to the united forces which have been sent to Utah. The whole issue of the Mormon rebellion depends upon the character of this remarkable person. He is the prophet, priest and king of the deluded people who compose the population of Utah, and whatever he wills, or orders, will be unconditionally and unhesitatingly obeyed. He has but to signify his wish that it should be done, and the utter destruction of the small army sent by our Government to intimidate him would be accomplished in the manner he indicated to the Saints in his speech on the 8th of October, when he said:

"As the Lord God lives we will waste our enemies by millions, if they send them here to destroy us, and not a man of us be hurt. That is the method I intend to pursue. Do you want to know what is going to be done with the enemies now on our borders? If they come here I will tell you what will be done. As soon as they start to come into our settlements let sleep depart from their eyes and slumber from their eyelids until they sleep in death, for they have been warned and forewarned that we will not tamely submit to being destroyed. Men shall be secreted here and there and shall waste away our enemies, in the name of Israel's God."

He plainly says that he is not such a fool as to make an open fight and expose his followers to the perils of Christian combats, and he cunningly tells them that,

"He that fights and runs away,
Lives to fight another day."

He is not literally correct in his quotation, but his fanatical followers will not be slow to appreciate the force of the cowardly maxim he quotes for their admiration and comfort.

The Los Angeles Star, of Dec. 8, says that a collision between Col. JOHNSTON's forces and the Mormons was inevitable; but we do not anticipate such an occurrence. If BRIGHAM YOUNG were as fanatical and ignorant as his wretched people, there would be no room to doubt that a contest would take place, and that it would be as bloody and savage as any of the fierce conflicts of the Sepoys with the British troops in India. But the Mormon leader is not so much of a fanatic as he appears. He is a cool-headed, unscrupulous knave, and he perfectly well comprehends the nature of his position, and what the inevitable consequences to himself and his people would be if he should but once attempt to oppose, by the use of warlike weapons, the entrance of the United States forces into Salt Lake City.

At the last accounts, they had advanced to within a hundred miles of the City, and if the Prophet had intended to give battle to them, he would have cut them off long before they approached so near his sanctuary. In his instructions to the men who were captured some months ago, he particularly enjoined upon them not to shed the blood of one of the "enemy;" and his cautious and calculating knavery is remarkably exhibited in his letter to Colonel ALEXANDER, wherein he addresses him in a perfectly respectful manner, while in his speech to the Saints, informing them of his having sent a dispatch to that officer, he indulges in a vein of rampant insolence and defiance towards the whole army, and particularly its commanding officer. It would not do for him to let his people know that he entertained a shadow of fear for any human authority, or that he acknowledged any power greater than his own. "Colonel ALEXANDER," he tells his trusting Saints,

"Preaches to me a little in his letter, telling me that the blood shed in this contest will be on my head; but that warning gave me no thought. What they will do I neither know nor care, for it will be just as the Lord God wills it. If he designs them to be wiped out, he will either cause them to come here, or will overrule some other plan to that end."

This is the confident style of his arrogant address to his people; but he had just written a letter to Col. ALEXANDER, in which he addresses that officer in these moderate and respectful terms:

"As citizens of the United States we both, it is presumable, feel strongly attached to the Constitution and institutions of our common country, and, as gentlemen, should probably agree in sustaining the dear-bought liberties bequeathed by our fathers, the positions in which we are individually placed being the only apparent cause of our present antagonism; you, as Colonel commanding, finding that you have a rigid duty to perform in obedience to orders, and I, a still more important duty to the people of this Territory."

There is nothing of the fanatic in these words. He acknowledges the official character of the commanding officer, and knows that he will do his duty without paying the least regard to Mormon bluster or opposition. All the fanfaronade and blasphemous appeals to the Lord of Hosts which BRIGHAM vents are for the ears of his followers. He knows too well that they could pass for no more than they were worth to waste them upon Colonel ALEXANDER; therefore, he quietly aims at convincing him of the folly of attempting to Winter in Utah, as the result must be utter destruction to him and his troops. This was early in October that these threats were made, and the last advices from our army was to the last of November, and no attack had been made upon them. The wily BRIGHAM might well be content to leave them to their fate amid the snows and storms of the mountains, and he would be well satisfied if they perished of cold and hunger. But let his motives be what they may, he has restrained his men from making an attack upon them, and he will continue to do so. His recalling the Saints from the Carson Valley, and laying in fresh supplies of warlike stores, may be for the purpose of providing himself with the means of repelling an attack, if any should be made upon him, and also to satisfy his people that he is in earnest, and intends to carry out his threats against the invading Gentiles.

If the Mormons were under the control of an ignorant and fanatical foreigner, who knew nothing of our institutions, and believed implicitly in the Mormon faith, we might have cause to fear a collision between them and the troops of the United States. But while BRIGHAM YOUNG remains the priest and ruler of that deluded people, we need entertain no serious apprehensions of a bloody contest. The inefficient and ill-appointed force sent by the Government to coerce the Mormons into good behavior will probably have an opposite effect, but another and better-appointed force can be sent out in the Spring, and the saints will find that they are not so far removed from the central power of the nation that they can practice their villainies with impunity. Their safety rests with the knavish sagacity of BRIGHAM YOUNG, who will not permit them to commit any overt acts against a power which he knows can so easily crush them and deprive him of his spiritual and civil authority.

Kansas Affairs.

It would be very unreasonable to expect the first telegrams of news from Kansas to be either reliable or intelligible. All experience is against the probability of such an occurrence. But we confess the reports published yesterday and to-day are unusually blind. It is stated that the State Legislature met at Topeka on the 4th and adjourned to Lawrence; and that Governor DENVER had sent in a message, of which an outline was given. It was also stated that "Governor ROBINSON" had sent in a message to the Legislature, but what Legislature, or upon what occasion, we do not find it easy to conjecture. On the 4th inst. the reported day of meeting, there was but one valid Territorial Legislature in existence, and that was the one elected in October last, in which the Free-State men obtained a majority of members, and which recently met in extra session under the call of Mr. STANTON. It is not probable that Governor ROBINSON would send in any message to that body,—nor is it any more likely that, after the part he took in the election of its members, he would attempt to give vitality or validity to the Topeka Constitution or to the State Government claimed to have been organized under it. That farce ended when the Free-State men took part in the Territorial election of last October.

We presume the story of Dr. ROBINSON's having sent in a message to any Legislature, or of his having claimed to act as Governor at all, is a pure invention. The Legislature undoubtedly met and Gov. DENVER sent in the usual message. Beyond that fact, we presume, nothing has happened.

We learn from Washington that a federal office-holder has reached the Capital from Kansas with a copy of the Lecompton Constitution as ratified by the vote of Dec. 21. Of the election on the 4th inst., no returns have reached us, and the reports that have been received are confused and contradictory. It has been stated that the Free-State Party had elected its entire State ticket, and a majority of the members of the new Legislature. We do not believe this report will be confirmed. The party was seriously divided upon the policy of voting, and a majority of the Territorial Convention decided not to vote. The minority put a ticket in nomination, but the movement, we apprehend, was too late and not sufficiently general to offer any prospect of success.

We presume all the State offices are in the hands of the Pro-Slavery minority. This will give increased sharpness to the controversy in Congress. Southern members will be eager to seize the fruits of this complicated and disreputable fraud,—while the Northern man, of any party, who shall vote to admit Kansas as a Slave State, under all the circumstances of the case, will most assuredly have an account to settle with his constituents hereafter.

Retrials of Criminals.

The decision of the Court of Appeals granting a new trial to CANGEMI, very naturally creates the impression that any person who has been convicted of murder, or any other crime, may, by the efforts of able counsel, succeed in procuring a new trial, and, as experience has heretofore proved in all such cases, a new trial is equivalent to an acquittal. It must be a very remarkable case that can stand the ordeal of three Courts.

Some years since, the case of EZRA WHITE, who was convicted of murder in this City, excited the same degree of attention which has been done by the case of CANGEMI. A new trial was granted on the score of a technical error in the Judge's charge about "good character," and the result was a conviction of murder in a minor degree. The conviction of the notorious POLLY BODINE was reversed in a similar manner, and the result was an acquittal. The case of HENRY CARNAL, who committed one of the most atrocious murders that ever shocked the sensibilities of the public, is still fresh on the minds of the people. His conviction was reversed in the plea of error in challenges of jurors disallowed by the Court; and he was subsequently convicted of a minor degree of homicide. ANDREW WILLIAMS was convicted of poisoning his wife, but a new trial was granted in his case by the Court of Appeals on account of technical errors committed by Judge ROOSEVELT on the trial; and the principal witness in his case having absconded he got clear. In the case of CHARLES PEVERELLY, who was convicted of arson, a new trial was granted on grounds which prevented another trial at all. Recently the Court of Appeals have granted a new trial to an alleged murderer near Troy, on the ground of error in the Judge's charge respecting "insanity," he having charged that insanity was a defence to be made out by the defendant, while the Court of Appeals held that doubt of sanity was the right of the accused. We understand that since this decision HUNTINGTON's counsel has taken a writ of error, and expects on this ruling of the Court to obtain a reversal of conviction in the case of that celebrated forger. The burglar who was convicted a year ago of robbing the dry goods store of C. C. MERCHANT & Co., in Broadway, is to have a retrial this month, on the ground of an error of the Court in refusing a challenge to a juror. Another burglar convicted of robbing a store in Broad-street, has been accorded a new trial, on account of an alleged error in the charge of Recorder SMITH.

All these reversals of convictions are on the ground of error in Judges' charges to juries, or for the refusal of challenges; and it will be well hereafter for the Judges of our Criminal Courts to give the most liberal margin to legal doubts in the case of prosecutions, so that when juries do agree in convicting a criminal their decisions shall not be reversed by the Court of Appeals.

A CURIOUS CASE AND A CYNICAL VERDICT.—We published yesterday morning an account of the death of a colored man named ROBERTS, who died, from a stab, in front of the Astor House on Wednesday night, at about 10 o'clock. Officer BELL, of the Police, upon reading an account of the affair yesterday morning, remembered meeting Dr. PHILLIPS on the previous evening, and seeing him in possession of a bloody dirk, which he said he had not used. He at once arrested PHILLIPS at his house, and a Coroner's inquest was held upon the body of the negro yesterday. Officer BELL was examined, and stated that PHILLIPS, upon being arrested, acknowledged that he stabbed the negro, but asserted that it was done in self-defence.

It seems that PHILLIPS is a doctor, and has had quarrels with a rival in the same branch of his business, who suspects him of tearing down his hand-bills. PHILLIPS states that as he was walking through Nassau-street, between Beekman and Ann, he was met by two persons who accosted him insultingly, accusing him of pulling down the hand-bills;—that he crossed the street and there met the negro, who struck him, upon which he held up his knife, and the negro rushed against it, and afterwards ran off, PHILLIPS pursuing him through Ann-street and crying "Stop thief." This was PHILLIPS' own story, as narrated to Officer BELL.

The Coroner's Jury did not seem to think it worth while to seek any further testimony, but upon the prisoner's own statement that he committed the homicide in self-defence, ordered him discharged! This is, certainly, a very curious mode of administering justice. Why were not the persons whom PHILLIPS claims to have met in Nassau-street hunted up, and their testimony elicited? The statements made by PHILLIPS are by no means satisfactory,—as they give no clear account either of the cause of the difficulty or of the manner of the assault.

We are glad to observe that Coroner CONNERY was not satisfied with the action of the Jury, and held PHILLIPS to bail in the sum of $1,000 to await further action. Cheap as human life has become in this City, we can scarcely afford as yet to regard the statements of acknowledged homicides on their own behalf as conclusive proof of their innocence.

JUDGE RUSSELL AND THE CONVICT WOGAN.—Judge RUSSELL's publication of the applications which induced him some time since to discharge the convict WOGAN without punishment, upon his conviction of arson, has directed public attention to this matter anew. We understand that when these appeals for clemency were first got up, a remonstrance, signed by all the leading merchants in the vicinity of WOGAN's well-known offences, was also sent to Judge RUSSELL. WOGAN's character was notoriously bad, and four warrants for his arrest had been issued by the Recorder during a short time previous to his trial, yet, for some reason or other, which, perhaps, Judge RUSSELL can explain, these warrants were never executed.

There seems no room to doubt that WOGAN was one of the worst characters that infest the City, and that a gross wrong was done to the public, as the event has proved, by releasing him from punishment for a heinous crime of which he had been duly convicted. It is perfectly evident, also, that the only ground upon which application for clemency on his behalf was made was that of party services. He was an active, unscrupulous, fighting attaché of the political party to which Judge RUSSELL belongs, and nearly all those who signed the application were office-holders of the same party. Not one of them ventures to certify to WOGAN's character from any personal knowledge; they all say that from what they have been told they are inclined to believe him a fit subject for clemency. And it was upon the strength of such appeals that Judge RUSSELL turned loose a man convicted of arson, and, as events both previous and subsequent have proved, capable of any crime.

OUR CITY AFFAIRS.—It seems impossible to exaggerate the ignorance and knavery which pervade the management of our City affairs. The slightest attempt to look beneath the surface in any department discloses facts utterly disgraceful to the parties concerned.

Mr. CONOVER, the Street Commissioner, mentions one case of the sort in a communication sent in to the Board of Aldermen last evening. It seems that Mr. ERBEN was awarded the sum of $15,805 for damage done to his property by the extension of Canal-street,—and this was to be paid him after deducting $9,000, the amount of two mortgages upon the property. Instead of subtracting this sum, it was actually added to the original award, and the City paid Mr. ERBEN $15,805, after paying off the mortgages—amounting to $9,000! Mr. CONOVER remarks that "this singular error doubtless escaped the notice of all the parties, including Mr. ERBEN." But what are we to think of the management of of our public business when such carelessness as this can occur?

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT.—The subject of international copyright is again before Congress. Mr. MORRIS, of Pennsylvania, has given notice of a bill upon this subject, the text of which will be found in another column. He proposes, it will be seen, that the benefit of our copyright laws shall be extended to foreigners whose works shall be "printed and published in the United States by a citizen of the United States" within one month after its publication in their own country. The importation of foreign copies of a work, copyrighted in the United States under the provisions of this act, by the author or publisher, is to render its importation or reprint free to any one. This last provision seems to be needlessly stringent; its object is evidently to prevent the importation of foreign copies of a work copyrighted here; but we can scarcely believe that our printers and publishers need so severe prohibition for their own protection.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.—Both the President and Secretary of the old Board of Education are superseded in the new one. Mr. GREEN declined to be a candidate for reelection, and Mr. GILBERT, who has been Secretary for some years, was defeated by Mr. BOWNE, who has been hitherto Clerk of the Common Pleas. Mr. GILBERT has discharged the duties of his office with assiduity, intelligence and to the entire satisfaction of the Board and the public. The change is made without doubt solely upon political grounds; and although the newly elected Secretary is well qualified in every way for the place, it is to be regretted that party politics should [illegible] which ought to be entirely free from its influence.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—To-night MOZART's opera of "Don Giovanni" will be produced under circumstances peculiarly favorable to its just interpretation. It is as usual the last production of the season, and will be played but three times. All the artists of the Academy are in the cast, viz: Mmes. LAGRANGE, GARGANOT, D'ANDRADE, and Messrs. GASSIER, LABOCETTA, BRIGNOLI, ROCCO, ARDEVANI and CARL FORMES. The orchestra will consist of one hundred performers; the chorus of one hundred and fifty voices. An assemblage like this is unknown in America, and the result will be a triumph without parallel.

CONCERT.—Miss WILLIAMS' Concert, last evening, at MOZART HALL attracted a fair audience. The beneficiaire is an excellent ballad singer, and merits the patronage of the public. Heretofore she has been heard to disadvantage—in a place not fitted for musical entertainments. This has militated against her success. When she becomes better known Miss WILLIAMS will undoubtedly become a public favorite. The concert was excellent of its kind; many (we might say most) of the songs were encored, and Mr. J. R. THOMAS received the unusual honor of a double encore. Mr. J. M. ASHER presided at the piano.

NIBLO'S SALOON.—Mr. ROBERT GOLDBECK, one of our best resident pianists, gives an attractive and artistically interesting Concert at NIBLO'S Saloon on Saturday evening. It is for the benefit of the Children's Aid Society, and is therefore doubly interesting. Miss WILLIAMS, Mr. ED. MOLLENHAUER, Mr. FRITZ KLEINER, Mr. CARL BERGMANN, and Mr. CHARLES GUILMETTE will assist Mr. GOLDBECK.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—The local drama called "The Poor of New-York," will be withdrawn after the present week. In spite of disastrous times it has enjoyed a career of unexampled prosperity, and has "run" longer than any local piece ever produced in this City. This fact is to be attributed not only to the exciting character of the drama itself, but to the efforts of the excellent artists who are in the cast—especially Mr. LESTER, who has individualized the character of Badger, and will be remembered by it. This gentleman takes his benefit on Saturday, and we trust the occasion will be properly remembered.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—The wonderful RAVELS took a short farewell of their friends and patrons last night. They will return for a serious leave-taking in about six weeks, after which they will retire—an unfashionable operation in these times. The house was crowded, and the performances passed off with their usual gleeful promptness. During the absence of the RAVELS the house will be occupied by DAN RICE's Equestrian and Zoological Show.

Novel Swindling Operation.

ROGUS "HONORARY DEGREES" FROM AMERICAN COLLEGES—PAYMENT DEMANDED—ENGLISH GENTLEMEN THE SUFFERERS—A BOLD GAME—SPICY CORRESPONDENCE.

We have been put in possession of certain letters which develop a novel and very remarkable class of swindling operations. The facts are as follows: A series of letters, purporting to emanate from the Faculties of different colleges in the United States, have been addressed to parties in England, acquainting them with the fact that honorary degrees have been conferred upon them at the request of friends; that the diplomas, therefore, has been forwarded to England; that, in compliance with the regulations of the institution, only one-third of the usual matriculation and graduation fees has been charged; and that that amount, some £8 10s., is due from the recipient of that new honor. Investigation proves that this game has been played for some time at the expense of Western colleges. The exposure of the fraud comes about through a half-awakened suspicion of the Principal of an Academy near Leeds, England, who sends to a friend in this city the letter announcing to him the fact that he has been dubbed "L.L. D." by Alton College in Illinois; and winding up by requesting him to pay up "£8 10" ($42 50) as fees for expenses. This demand caused the recipient of the epistle to experience a desire for certainty before he paid the money; and it turns out that the whole affair is a forgery. Not only this, but the Acting President of Shurtleff College at Alton (the only College in that place) states that the names of several Western Colleges have been similarly employed. The letter announcing the conferring of the degree is written upon French paper, is without postmark, and the manuscript resembles that of an Englishman. It reads as follows:

ALTON COLLEGE,
ILLINOIS, U. S. A., Feb. 27, 1857.

SIR: Some time ago, one of our Trustees received a letter from a literary friend of his in England, highly complimentary of you, and expressing a wish that our College should confer on you the honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws. I have the pleasure of informing you that at the last meeting of our Senators Academicians, held on Jan. 20, 1857, it was resolved unanimously, that the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws be conferred on you, and that a diploma confirmatory of the act of the Senate be sent to you at first convenient opportunity. Such act of the Senate to be subject to the College by-laws, of the date July 6, 1855, viz: "And that those on whom the honorary degree of LL. D. is conferred shall be required to pay a third part only of the usual matriculation and graduation fees, which third part is £8 10s., which sum is to be expended on the College Library and Museum, &c., &c. Our Mr. HUNTER is preparing to leave this for England, and takes your diploma with him, and will post it for you on his arrival. As Mr. H. will be in England for a very short time only, you would oblige us by writing to Mr. H., when your diploma reaches you, and at same time please to send him the College fee of £8 10s., as Mr. HUNTER is authorized by our Senate to receive the same. And, with the very kind respect of our Professors, I am, yours respectfully,

JOHN GRIFFITHS.

Mr. HUNTER's address for at least a week after you receive your diploma, will be as under:

Mr. DAVID HUNTER, of America; care of Messrs. LINCOLN & SON, booksellers, Caxton House, Blackfriars' Road, London.

To JOHN SARGENT, L.L. D., Turton Hall Academy, near Leeds, England.

Doubts of the authenticity of this document appearing to have been excited in the mind of Mr. SARGENT, he encloses the letter to Mr. PISORE, a friend in New-York, desiring him to use his endeavors to ascertain the facts of the case; describes the diploma sent him, as written upon parchment, and bearing the seal of the college; and gives a list of the signatures appended to it, as follows:

Thos. Bailey, D. D.; Jno. Patterson, P. C.; Thos. Partington, P. W. R.; Rn. Howard, L.L. D.; Geo. Springfield, D. D.; Thos. Bradley, P. C.; Jno. Griffiths, P. C.; David Hunter, A. M. C.

Mr. "Jno. Griffiths, P. C." (Pickwick Club?) whose name appears in this letter, is supposed to be the writer of the epistle to Mr. SARGENT. What the meaning of the mysterious initials "P. C." may be, does not appear. Nor is there any explanation of the letters "P. W. R.", which form a handle to the patronymic of Mr. "Thos. Partington"; nor are we any wiser touching the professional capacity of Mr. "David Hunter," the gentleman who was to receive the "£8, 10s." who rejoices in the title of "A. M. C."

The letter was laid before Bishop WHITEHOUSE, of Illinois, who, in the following note, emphatically pronounces it a forgery:

DEAR SIR: On the presenting of the paper, I had no hesitation in pronouncing it a clumsy forgery, and I am persuaded, from strong internal evidence, the work of an Englishman. But to be entirely sure, I forwarded the document to Rev. Dr. MCMASTERS, Acting President of Shurtleff College, Alton, and inclose for you his conclusive letter. I hope the matter will be fully exposed by you or some of your friends, in our church periodicals and secular press. In this, Mr. CONRY will assist you. Truly yours,

HENRY J. WHITEHOUSE.

Mr. WM. JAMES PESORE, No. 94 Eleventh-street.
Jan. 9, 1858.

The letter from Dr. MCMASTERS, inclosed in the Bishop's note, settles the matter. He says:

ALTON, Saturday, Jan. 2, 1858.

MY DEAR BISHOP: Yours of the 25th ult. is received. It is a base forgery. One other of the same kind has been sent to me within the last three months, and several to other Presidents of Western Colleges. It has become a large business. I do not think they are getting up in the United States. They bear internal evidence of English or foreign origin. Whether the error in name "Alton College," be intentional or not, I cannot say, though I think it is intentional—just as counterfeiters sometimes get up banks which have no existence. I have not yet heard of any of these diplomas having just the name of the colleges which they intend to represent. This has not only the wrong name of the college, but not a single signature that has ever been connected with Shurtleff College, either in its Faculty or Board.

It is possible that some Yankee may have gone to England on this business. Yours truly,

S. Y. MCMASTERS.

P. S.—I will advertise in the Western papers. Will you be so good as to have it properly exposed in the New-York papers, for the benefit of the public, and for colleges generally?

According to this statement, a curious game has been boldly played. There is no present means of ascertaining the extent of the swindle, nor the amount of money wrung out of ambitious gentlemen on the other side of the Atlantic, to the tune of "a V spiece." It is a very curious development.

Ship Great Republic Spoken.

Messrs. A. A. LOW & BROTHERS, the owners of the Great Republic, have received the following dispatch:

BOSTON, Thursday, Jan. 14.

The ship Great Republic was spoken by the ship Refuge at this port, Dec. 16, in lat. 5° 21' N., lon. 32° 30' W.

This position is nearly due east of Cape St. Roque. The Great Republic, it will be remembered, put into the Falkland Islands disabled, with a heavy cargo of guano from the Chincha Islands, bound to London. A schooner was sent to Montevideo for sails and spars, the ship being obliged to await her return before she could complete her repairs. She has probably by this time arrived safely at London, her port of destination.

THE ELEVENTH WARD ELECTION HOMICIDE—BAIL REFUSED FOR THE PRISONERS.—The examination in the case of Officers HILLER, DUFFY and VAN TASSEL of the Eleventh Ward, charged with shooting PATRICK VANSEN during a disturbance at the eighth poll District of the Eleventh Ward on the night of the last December election, was set down for 2 P. M., yesterday, at the Tombs, before Justice COMMISS. On the appearance of the complainants at the Lower Police Court at the hour designated, they were notified to proceed before Justice ROSEKRANS, of the Supreme Court, with a writ of certiorari and habeas corpus having been issued requiring their attendance relative to compelling the accused to bail.

General HUN, counsel for the officers, urged the Justice to admit the accused to bail on the ground that the charge preferred against them, if proven, would only amount to manslaughter.

Mr. CHARLES S. SPRINGER, counsel for the complainant, insisted that the charge was one of murder, and that until the preliminary examination in the case was finished before the Magistrate having the warrants the Judge had no right to allow bail to be given.

After hearing arguments on both sides, Justice ROSEKRANS declined against admitting the accused to bail, and upon this decision the parties repaired before Justice COMMISS, where the examination of witnesses was entered upon. Mrs. VANSEN, the wife of the deceased, was examined at a long examination, the most of which occupied all the afternoon. The testimony did not vary materially from the story given at the Coroner's inquest, of yesterday, published. An adjournment took place till 2 P. M. to-day. There are upwards of [illegible] witnesses to be examined, which will occupy several days. The prisoners, officers of the Eleventh Precinct.

FROM ALBANY.

[illegible] Organization of the House—Democratic Caucus Call—Discussion of the Spread Eagle—Dullness in the Senate—Election of Officers of Mineral Institutions—Redemption of Lands Sold under Foreclosure of Mortgage—Allowing Aliens to Hold and Convey Real Estate—A Slight Overdraw by the Attorney-General—Executive Session, etc.

[Correspondence of the New-York Times.]

ALBANY, Wednesday, Jan. 13, 1857.

The House is not yet organized—notwithstanding the resolutions given yesterday by Mr. Law. After the adjournment, the Democratic Party went into caucus, but arrived at no definite conclusions. It was ascertained, almost beyond a doubt, that some of the Democratic members would not vote for an American under any circumstances, consequently it seemed like "Love's labor lost," to continue negotiations upon the basis of a division of the spoils. If they could obtain, for a specific consideration, the votes of a sufficient number of Americans to elect Mr. Alvord, Speaker, and Mr. Reilly, Clerk, they would be willing to make terms—but they feel themselves unable to stand up an hour under the charge of voting for a Know-Nothing. This was the substance of the caucus conclusions of last night. At another meeting held this morning, the result was substantially the same.

The Republicans adhere with tenacity to the position which they were found to assume in the beginning. There appears to be no division of opinion among them, and in the end they will in all probability be found standing as a unit, by the nominees of their caucus.

The Americans even, in their small cabal, seem to be restrained by the same divided councils that have been so potent in reducing that party from the position of a power in the State to that of a foot-ball in the lobby. As ever, it is now, a medium for the gratification of all the most degrading passions to which human nature is subject. To-day, as always, it stands in the capitol as the embodiment of treachery, the guide-post to corruption, the representative of hatred, and the mouth-piece and servant of a horde of soured, disappointed men, whose ambition exceeded their deserts. It is the hatred of Know, the envy of Barnum, the corruption of Sammons that defeatures and controls the actions of the American Party, and prevents for a time that dissolution and amalgamation which is natural and inevitable.

How much longer such motives and counsels are to be dominant, it is difficult to conjecture. I think they must soon exhaust themselves.

On a preliminary vote to adopt the rules of the last house, the Democrats and Americans this morning voted together. On the ballots for Speaker the result was the same as heretofore. After the second ballot, Mr. Reynolds, American, returned from home, and though voting for Mr. Law, expressed a determination to go for Alvord. This set the whole House in a commotion. Perplexed in, there would be wanting but one more American vote to determine the result. The Americans who would not go with the Democrats, after some fluttering, asked for an adjournment. The Republicans favored this motion, as did also some of the Democrats, who begun to fear that they were getting aid that would not be comfort. The Clerk announced the result—ayes 60, Noes 52. A Democrat of the spoils school challenged the count. The Clerk named the gentleman one of the tellers, and he announced the result as ayes 61, noes 51, so the adjournment was carried, and now the poor, distracted, harassed and disconsolate "spread eagle" is again in the hands of the Philistines. No doubt he is having a lively time of it.

There was scarcely any business done in the Senate. Mr. Brow gave notice of a bill that may develop into discussions of some importance. It is to regulate the manner in which officers of moneyed institutions shall be elected. At present this is but a proposition—an embryo that is yet to have the details worked out.

Senator Noxon gave notice of a bill to permit the mortgagee of lands sold under foreclosure to redeem them within one year after a sale—creditors of a mortgagee to have a right of redemption for fifteen months.

Senator Noxon has also in contemplation some amendments to the Homestead exemption law, which will simplify the process by which the benefits of that act are secured to householders.

Senator Mather proposes to extend to aliens the right to hold and convey real estate. I suppose this is a proposition that will be favored by the constituents whom Senator Mather represents, but it seems hardly possible that such a departure from a settled theory will be tolerated by the country. While the reasons which governed in the adoption of that theory have lost the force which they had in former years, I think there has been a large increase of the prejudices and jealousies of the native-born against the relaxation of any laws now in force prohibiting or embarrassing the progress of foreign influence.

The Commissioners appointed to examine the accounts of the various disbursing officers of the State made a report this morning. They find that during the year there was disbursed from the Treasurer's office a total of $17,804,701 09. The vouchers for this great amount cover sums varying from $2 to $200,000. With three exceptions they are found to be correct. Those three are for bills rendered by the late Attorney-General, S. B. Christy, for services in the following cases, and after the following rates:

Twenty-one days attendance on trial of Lewis Baker, June, 1856, at $25	$525
Sixteen days in December, on trial of Baker	625
Eleven days on trial of Mrs. Cunningham	450
Total	$1,600

for which the Commissioners think there is no law. In fact it is held to be a direct violation of the Constitution. A good slice, this.

Senator Sloan gives notice of a bill for restoring to moneyed corporations, whose assets may have passed to the possession of receivers, any balance of such assets remaining after the debts of such corporation shall have been paid, or secured to be paid.

It was executive session to-day—the first of the season. I believe his Excellency communicated nothing to the Senate but the names of many gentlemen whom he desired to have confirmed as notaries. It was thought possible the Governor might send in a nomination for the office of Auditor. But that chick is not ready to break its shell. It has not had sufficient heat in the Executive nest to hasten the process of incubation. The Governor has only had since last April to look around for a candidate, and everybody knows that is not time sufficient for the resuscitation of any person antiquated enough to be the recipient of such a position. Calendar of the Court of Appeals—The House not Organized—Dull Times in the Senate—The Kansas Resolves—The Inebriate Asylum a Lazy Beggar—The Canconi Case—Matrimonial Intentions of President Fillmore, &c.

ALBANY, Thursday, Jan. 14.

The following numbers will be called in the Court of Appeals on the 15th: 26, 70, 22, 39, 40, 41, 52, [illegible]

No organization of the House yet, and the end, to all outward appearance, as remote as ever. There were four or five ballots for Speaker, resulting as before.

Mr. Fenimore, Republican, made an effort to elect under the plurality rule, but it failed, the Democrats and Americans uniting in voting down the proposition. A reconciliation in the lobby is beginning to be manifest, and, if it were possible, I think "see lobbies" would fix up an arrangement. But this complication seems to be beyond the range of their experience. I know that such a statement seems improbable, but it is nevertheless true—for I have the assurance of several of those veritable and ve(f)racious that they are perfectly bewildered.

The prayers preceding legislation are seldom marked for any great originality of thought or force of expression. An exception was this morning's in the House, when Rev. Mr. Dixon cited "the small progress made in the work of organization, as a melancholy evidence of our wilfulness and lack of understanding." A good hit that.

There was little routine business doing in the Senate to-day, the most noticeable paper presented being a series of resolutions offered by Senator Thomas, requesting our representatives in Congress to secure the passage of a law constituting the Court of Claims a tribunal for hearing and determining the character and amounts of all such indebtedness as may be found to have been created by citizens of the United States [illegible]

Senator Bowen presented and considered his remarks upon the resolves of last session relative to the Kansas difficulties. He spoke for some two hours, and concluded by moving the adoption of a series of resolves directly opposite to those of last session. Laid over under the rules.

While the reasons which governed in the adoption of that theory have lost the force which they had in former years, I think there has been a large increase of the prejudices and jealousies of the native-born against the relaxation of any laws now in force prohibiting or embarrassing the progress of foreign influence.

The Commissioners appointed to examine the accounts of the various disbursing officers of the State made a report this morning. They find that during the year there was disbursed from the Treasurer's office a total of $17,804,701 09. The vouchers for this great amount cover sums varying from $2 to $200,000. With three exceptions they are found to be correct. Those three are for bills rendered by the late Attorney-General, S. B. Christy, for services in the following cases, and after the following rates:

Twenty-one days attendance on trial of Lewis Baker, June, 1856, at $25	$525
Sixteen days in December, on trial of Baker	625
Eleven days on trial of Mrs. Cunningham	450
Total	$1,600

for which the Commissioners think there is no law. In fact it is held to be a direct violation of the Constitution. A good slice, this.

Senator Sloan gives notice of a bill for restoring to moneyed corporations, whose assets may have passed to the possession of receivers, any balance of such assets remaining after the debts of such corporation shall have been paid, or secured to be paid.

It was executive session to-day—the first of the season. I believe his Excellency communicated nothing to the Senate but the names of many gentlemen whom he desired to have confirmed as notaries. It was thought possible the Governor might send in a nomination for the office of Auditor. But that chick is not ready to break its shell. It has not had sufficient heat in the Executive nest to hasten the process of incubation. The Governor has only had since last April to look around for a candidate, and everybody knows that is not time sufficient for the resuscitation of any person antiquated enough to be the recipient of such a position. LEO.

Calendar of the Court of Appeals—The House not Organized—Dull Times in the Senate—The Kansas Resolves—The Inebriate Asylum a Lazy Beggar—The Canconi Case—Matrimonial Intentions of President Fillmore, &c.

ALBANY, Thursday, Jan. 14.

The following numbers will be called in the Court of Appeals on the 15th: 26, 70, 22, 39, 40, 41, 52, [illegible]

No organization of the House yet, and the end, to all outward appearance, as remote as ever. There were four or five ballots for Speaker, resulting as before.

Mr. Fenimore, Republican, made an effort to elect under the plurality rule, but it failed, the Democrats and Americans uniting in voting down the proposition. A reconciliation in the lobby is beginning to be manifest, and, if it were possible, I think "see lobbies" would fix up an arrangement. But this complication seems to be beyond the range of their experience. I know that such a statement seems improbable, but it is nevertheless true—for I have the assurance of several of those veritable and ve(f)racious that they are perfectly bewildered.

The prayers preceding legislation are seldom marked for any great originality of thought or force of expression. An exception was this morning's in the House, when Rev. Mr. Dixon cited "the small progress made in the work of organization, as a melancholy evidence of our wilfulness and lack of understanding." A good hit that.

There was little routine business doing in the Senate to-day, the most noticeable paper presented being a series of resolutions offered by Senator Thomas, requesting our representatives in Congress to secure the passage of a law constituting the Court of Claims a tribunal for hearing and determining the character and amounts of all such indebtedness as may be found to have been created by citizens of the United States [illegible]

Senator Bowen presented and considered his remarks upon the resolves of last session relative to the Kansas difficulties. He spoke for some two hours, and concluded by moving the adoption of a series of resolves directly opposite to those of last session. Laid over under the rules.

Senator Noxon gave notice of a bill to permit the mortgagee of lands sold under foreclosure to redeem them within one year after a sale—creditors of a mortgagee to have a right of redemption for fifteen months.

Senator Noxon has also in contemplation some amendments to the Homestead exemption law, which will simplify the process by which the benefits of that act are secured to householders.

Senator Mather proposes to extend to aliens the right to hold and convey real estate. I suppose this is a proposition that will be favored by the constituents whom Senator Mather represents, but it seems hardly possible that such a departure from a settled theory will

A CHRISTIAN MEMORIAL OF TWO SISTERS.
12mo., cloth. 60 cents.
This work is a beautiful tribute to the memory of MARIA and ANN JAY, eldest daughters of one who may well be termed the Christian Hero of our Revolution—the late Gov. JAY, of New-York, and first Chief Justice of the United States—the friend of Washington, and a leading actor both at home and abroad in building up and consolidating our liberty, policy and laws. Their mother was of the old aristocratic root of the Livingstons. This is a book that will meet with a cordial welcome from the religious public, and be cherished as an illustration of exemplary piety and Christian benevolence, almost without a parallel.

METROPOLITAN POLICE.

OFFICE OF THE SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE, NO. 413 BROOME-ST., CORNER OF ELM.—New-York, Jan. 6, 1858.—To the Inspectors or Captains of the Metropolitan Police for the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn:
I am directed by the Commissioners of Police to promulgate to the officers, who will communicate to the Patrolmen under their respective commands, the annexed Resolutions, which have been adopted by them, and to require of you a rigid enforcement of this order.
The Commissioners of Police having caused to be delivered to each officer and patrolman, a copy of the law constituting and governing the Metropolitan Police Department, together with the Rules and Regulations adopted by them, no excuse or apology, based upon ignorance of the law, can now be offered in justification or extenuation of any violation of official duty.
The Commissioners will hold the officers of every rank to their rigorous observance, subjecting the violators to severe pecuniary penalties, or dismissal from office.
With the most anxious desire to elevate the character of the Police, so as to secure the confidence and respect of the community we represent, I cannot avoid calling the attention of the officers and patrolmen to the necessity of strict attention to their dress and general deportment. Negligence in dress, and a careless and unsoldierlike deportment, will bring dishonor on the force, and tend to destroy or greatly diminish that influence that your responsible position should entitle you.
It is too much the habit of policemen to loiter on the corner of the streets, and enter into familiar conversation with persons unconnected with their duties, instead of patrolling their beats as required by the rules and regulations of the Department.
When on duty their time belongs to the public, from whom they receive an ample remuneration, and who have a right to exact from them exclusive devotion to their duty.
I am directed by the Commissioners of Police to require of the respective captains (except in cases where men are specially detailed by the Commissioners) that they preserve order at all places within their command, where patrolmen have hitherto been detailed, and that they make such disposition of the men under their command as will accomplish those objects.
The patrolmen detailed to special duty in the city of Brooklyn will continue to perform that duty until the further direction of the Board of Commissioners.
The following resolutions were passed by the Board on the 2d January, 1858:
Resolved, That the General Superintendent be directed to issue an order, to be read in the Station-houses, and published in the newspapers of New-York and Brooklyn, setting forth that as every member of the force has now a copy of the Rules and Regulations, this Board will hold officers of every rank to their strictest observance, and will punish every violation of those rules by severe pecuniary penalties or by dismissal from the service, and the General Superintendent is directed in each order to allude to the careless deportment of many of the patrolmen while on duty, and to their negligence in dress, and to admonish them that they must constantly patrol their beats, and not stand in the streets, or converse with any persons except in the performance of duty.
Resolved, That all special details of Patrolmen except to the places and for the purposes recommended in the report of the Committee on General Discipline, of this date, be abolished.
Resolved, That the Captains of the several Precincts shall be responsible for good order at all places therein where patrolmen have hitherto been detailed, and they are hereby authorized to make such arrangements in the disposition of the men under their command, for that purpose, as they may deem sufficient.
F. A. TALLMADGE, Superintendent of Police.

Homicide by a Colored Boy in Brooklyn.

Two colored boys, WM. ALLEN, aged 17, and HENRY HAYNES, aged 14, had a difficulty at the corner of Navy and Johnson streets, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon. At last HAYNES threw a piece of a brick at ALLEN, which took effect on the left side of his head just above the ear, fracturing the skull so severely that he died from the injury last evening. ALLEN, when struck by the brick, fell senseless to the sidewalk, and was immediately conveyed into his father's house, No. 147 Navy-street, near which place he was at the time of the difficulty. Dr. SWAIN was called in, but the injury was of such a nature that he could afford no relief.

The witnesses of the affair not deeming the injury a serious one, no efforts were made to arrest HAYNES, and the moment he saw the effect of the blow inflicted he left. The Police, up to 12 o'clock last night, had not been able to find his whereabouts. The last trace of him was lost near one of the ferries, and it is supposed that he is now somewhere in New-York City.

The father of ALLEN gives the following particulars of the origin of this unfortunate affair: He says, that yesterday noon he sent his son into the woodshed to cut wood. While there HAYNES came in and annoyed him so much that he pushed him out several times. Finally HAYNES went to the street and taking a hand-cart belonging to ALLEN, dragged it up the street a block or two. This was done twice and was brought back each time by the deceased. The second time, as he reached his father's house, HAYNES being close upon him, ALLEN slapped him upon the mouth. HAYNES then attempted to pick up a brick in the street, when ALLEN kicked it from his hand and started to enter his father's house; as he reached the door the brick was thrown, inflicting the injury and causing the death of ALLEN as above stated.

Another story is that the two boys had a scuffle in the forepart of the day, and HAYNES, being the smallest, got the worst of it, which made him quite angry. They met again about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when the contest was renewed, both being in good humor. Again HAYNES was thrown and got angry, and it was while entertaining this feeling that he picked up the brick, and smarting under the mortification of having come off second best in the contest, he threw it at his successful antagonist.

HAYNES' parents reside at No. 195 Navy-street, and he is now or has been employed in some capacity on board the United States steamer Wabash. Several persons who pretend to know him give anything but a favorable report of his character. The Police are on his track, and will undoubtedly have him in custody to-day.

The Ninth Ward Outrage.

The examination of SMITH and MYERS, charged with robbing and attempting to kill JOHN R. JAQUES, of Newark, in the Ninth Ward of Brooklyn, on the 5th inst., was continued yesterday before Justice MERRIAM.

Ex-Judge DAVID K. RUTGER appeared for the people, and Mr. PARSMATER for the accused.

The testimony of the complaining witness, JAQUES, heretofore published, it will be seen, is corroborated thus far in many particulars by the following testimony:

WM. F. WOOD, sworn.—I reside in Newark; know Mr. Jaques; know defendant Smith; don't know Myers; knew of Smith having been prosecuted for selling liquor without license; it was returnable on the 29th of December last, before Justice Hamlin; Mr. Jaques and Mr. Smith were there in the court-room; I heard Mr. Smith say on the 29th day of December, at this place, in Squire Hamlin's office, that he would have satisfaction, and nodded his head towards Mr. Jaques and Mr. Briggs the prosecutor; they did not hear it; Jaques was there as a witness against Smith; the same suit was adjourned until the 6th of January, and is now adjourned to the 20th of January.

Cross-examined by Mr. Parmenter.—I have lived in Newark ten years, or about that time; have been there the last six months; have lived in Trenton, N. J., three or four months before; I came to Newark last June.

Witness declines to answer whether he came to Newark from State Prison or not.

Mary Jacques, sworn.—Is the wife of John R. Jaques; never knew much of Smith; on the night I heard him make the threats and since I have seen him he is; I identify him as the same person who made the threats; it was Dec. 29, the day on which the suit was to come off against Smith; was standing by Smith's door on the night of the 29th of December; he keeps a grocery and liquor store; the door was open; Smith was behind the bar drawing a glass of liquor; heard him say that he saw exactly what they were trying to do; there were some three or four persons in the store; they were trying to make money out of him, he said, and said that they would not get a d—d cent out of him, and that he would have satisfaction of them if it was a year hence; one person asked: "What man?" and he said: "That tailor that was going to swear against me;" the person spoke again, and said: "What tailor—that one up the street?" and he said: "No, the one that lived down here a ways;" he said one or two other words, but I did not understand them; we live "down" the street; went to Smith's to see if my husband was there.

Cross-examined.—Don't think I was half a yard from the door; I was standing on the stoop; don't know of any other tailor residing on that street.

Wealthy Ann Jaques, sworn.—I am the daughter of John R. Jaques; don't know defendant Smith; have seen him before now; saw him once in his store and here in the court; his store is in Canal-street, Newark; saw him there last Wednesday, I believe; my father had been gone all night previous and I went there to inquire about him; asked Smith if he knew where my father was, he said no; asked him if he saw my father, and he said no he had not seen him; I told him he must have seen him, because he went to New-York with him; Smith said he went to New-York, but my father did not go with him; he said that father went in another train and after he got to New-York he met him and asked him what he came on for; he said father told him that he came over to buy paint brushes, and when he did him good by my father requested him to write a note to my mother that she might not be uneasy; that he would be home that night, Wednesday night; it was just 12 o'clock M. when I went to Smith's house.

Cross-examined.—My mother told me that I was coming to Brooklyn to tell what Smith told me; she told me the next day to remember what he said; told mother what Smith said when I came back from his store.

Thomas Fortune, sworn.—Resides on Atlantic, near Washington-avenue, Brooklyn; about five minutes after twelve o'clock on the night of Tuesday the 5th, my neighbor, Barnard McKinney, knocked at my window and told me that there was a man in the pond; witness, with Mr. John H. Seifkin and McNarry went to the pond, which is about seventy feet from the house, in front; found Jaques lying upon his left side, with his feet toward the water; his head was seven or eight feet from the water; took hold of him, saw he could not speak; I took hold of him first; tried to lift him up and found he was wet; raised him up and found that he could not stand; took him to the Ninth Ward Station-house; while taking him to the Station-house, asked him his name; he said something that I understood to be "Jake"; he was unconscious and entirely helpless when we got to the Station; his arms and legs were stiff, so that we could not bend them; his clothing was taken off; a pocket in his pants was torn out; there was no money on his person; Jaques could have fallen into the pond from Atlantic-avenue; his hat was on his head, and I should suppose had not been in the water.

John Hooper, sworn.—I am doorman at the Ninth Ward Precinct Station; on the night of the 5th inst., about twenty minutes past twelve o'clock, John R. Jaques was brought to the Station-house, by three men, Mr. Fortune, Mr. McNarry and Mr. Seifkin; they brought him in and laid him on the floor; his clothes were thoroughly saturated with water and mud, except his hat—yellow, muddy water; helped to raise him up; his arms and neck were so rigid that we could not bend them; stripped him with great difficulty, he being so rigid; there were no signs of life; he was helpless and cold—so much so that I considered him a drowned man, and wiped him; wiped his mouth, nose and eyes; they were covered with slime; wrapped him in blankets; dropped water on his head, rubbing his armpits, hands and feet with flannel; applied my mouth to his and drew his breath; he came too about an hour after he was brought in; laid him on his side near the stove, and the first movement that he made was about six o'clock in the morning; he muttered several times during the night about being in the water and Peter Smith; so much so that I thought he was Peter Smith; I shook him and called him by that name, but he made no answer; when he first came to consciousness he rolled over; in about half an hour he said "Where am I?" I said, "You are among friends in the Station-house;" friends who will take care of you;" he then said, "In what Station-house?" he then said, "There is a wicked devil lying near here who has been trying to murder me, and I want him arrested;" he keeps an oyster saloon [illegible] Smith from N[illegible] made me d[illegible] me; he [illegible] several [illegible] where [illegible] Pr[illegible] stripped him I stripped and he had a fit, from the [illegible] being as rigid; there was a contusion on the [illegible] of his face, and bruises on both legs; his contusions were more on one side; can't say which side.

Adjourned to Saturday next.

SUIT AGAINST A GAS LIGHT COMPANY.—The Circuit Court, Brooklyn, was occupied all day yesterday in a suit against the Brooklyn Gas Light Company, brought by a Mr. MILLER, of Henry-street, to recover $3,000 damages. It appears that the gas bill was not paid in due time, and the Company caused the flow of gas to be stopped, and also cut off the pipe between the metre and the stop-cock. It is alleged that this was done without the knowledge of the occupants of the house, and when the gas was turned on by the occupant the result was an explosion, the metre being in a dark cellar where a light was necessary to see it. By the explosion Miss MILLER was severely injured.

The case is still on.

LIBEL SUIT AGAINST THE EXPRESS.—The case of P. K. DAVO, against the Express for libel, was called on in the Circuit Court, Brooklyn, yesterday morning, but by consent, the trial thereof was postponed until another day.

The libel consisted in publishing plaintiff as an imposter, a "blower," and a swindler. The plaintiff, it seems, made a bet that the circulation of the Express in November, 1856, did not exceed 3,000 copies daily, and it is alleged, refused to pay the same, which brought out the article containing the libel, on Nov. 11, 1856.

The defence is, that plaintiff, who is an advertising agent, was in the continual habit of decaying the Express, thereby drawing advertising from the paper.

BROOKLYN SABBATH SCHOOLS.—The Clinton-avenue Congregational Church Sabbath School, Brooklyn, during the last year, has increased from 165 to 225.

The Superintendent of the Warren-street Sabbath School, Brooklyn, reports that since the organization of that mission they had held more than 1,000 sessions of their school, and more than 20,000 meetings of teachers and classes, instructed 20,000 children, employed more than 250 teachers, and held more than 500 teachers' meetings; 100 persons had been hopefully converted. A little church has been organized, and 100 members gathered into it, 75 of whom now remain. In this school 400 children are annually instructed, and constant additions are made to the church—seven from one family, chiefly through the instrumentality of a little girl. The Bible class has during the last three years embraced 84 persons, 51 of whom have been converted.

It has been suggested that all of the churches in Brooklyn hold morning and evening services, and that the afternoon be devoted to Bible classes and mission schools. The regular Sabbath schools are held Sabbath morning. The suggestion meets with favor, and will undoubtedly eventually be adopted.
